NO WAR WITH RUSSIA, ALLIES TO TRADE WITH HER: BLOCKADE SUDDENLY RAISED BY PARIS COUNCIL AFTER LEAGUE OF NATIONS IS ORGANIZED

JOHN BARLEYCORN DIED PEACEFULLY AT THE TOLL OF 12

A Few Restaurants Held Wet Funeral Ceremonies, but There Were No Orgies Here.

COL. PORTER MADE NO RAIDS

But 100 Agents and 15,000 City Police Will Get After All Offenders Today.

CHURCHES TO TAKE ACTION

Citizens Urged by 1,000 Pastors to Circumvent All Efforts to Violate the Law.

With little that differed from normal wartime prohibition drinking habits, New York City entered at 12:01 o'clock this morning into the long dry spell. Here and there enterprising restaurateurs capitalized the demise of John Barleycorn with wet funeral ceremonies, but the spontaneous orgies of drink that were predicted failed in large part to occur on schedule. At the rails of the ordinary saloons stood a few old-timers, glad for what they could get, but for the most part the already dilapidated interiors appeared as cheerless as the cold-snow-covered streets. Instead of passing from us in violent paroxysms, the demon rum lay down to a painless, peaceful, though lamented, by some, death.

At none of the hotels were formal celebrations arranged. No reservations had been made. When the usual theatre crowd poured into the hotels there was some demand for extra glasses, but all the liquor was drawn from the hip. At the Park Avenue Hotel the obsequies were attended by numerous weeping Bacchante. George L. Sheldon, a Philadelphia publisher, was chief mourner at one of the ceremonies, and a large congregation joined with him in the exhibition of sorrow. Black was the prevailing color—clothes, table cloths, even the walls, while the casket was filled with black bottles.

At Healy's Restaurant, Broadway and Ninety-fifth Street, the lamentations over the corpse took the form of dancing, while each of the diners received a miniature casket as a souvenir.

At Little Hungary, the famous wine-house at Suffolk and Houston Streets, one of the haunts of Theodore Roosevelt when he was Police Commissioner, Max Schwartz, the proprietor, paid his respects to the deceased. Alderman Louis Zeltner was master of ceremonies and led in the drinking of toasts to every notable who ever patronized the place.

In the afternoon Colonel Daniel L. Porter, Supervisor of Internal Revenue Agents for the New York District, made it plain that he intended no spectacular last minute raids, that he would not send for special operatives to interfere with farewell celebrations, but also emphasized the fact that he was preparing for a rigid enforcement of the law. He was of the opinion that the penalties for violation were so severe that the people of New York would not attempt to violate the law. Not only will his 100 agents be on the alert, but all of the 15,000 policemen will take part in the enforcement.

Warning From 1,000 Pastors.

William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, celebrated the advent of national prohibition with a broadside directed at New York City in the form of an address signed by 1,000 pastors of more than twenty-five denominations from every one of the fifty-seven counties of New York State outside of New York City. Mr. Anderson calls it "the most remarkable document ever addressed to the clergy of a great city." According to these ministers, New York City is the "centre of nullification and seditious activity designed to prevent the enforcement of the prohibition amendment," while New York State is described as the "danger point in the whole nation," and New York City as the danger point in New York State in the "tremendous struggle now on for the retention, protection and enforcement of prohibition."

The immediate purpose of the address is to promote the Concerted Discussion observance of "Law and Order" Sunday tomorrow, which the Federal Government through the Internal Revenue Commissioner has asked the clergy of America to participate in, and the city pastors are urged to push enrollment in the "Allied Citizens of America, a State-wide system of local organization as a basis upon which all law-abiding citizens can unite to uphold the supremacy of law, particularly the Eighteenth

Oklahoma Republicans Split; One Delegation for Wood

SHAWNEE, Okla., Jan. 16.—Two sets of delegates, one instructed to vote for General Wood for President and the other uninstructed, were chosen by the Fourth Congressional District Republican convention here today. The question of which set of delegates will be seated in the national convention will have to be determined by the Credentials Committee of the convention.

The meeting at which the uninstructed set of delegates were chosen passed resolutions indorsing the "American stand" of Lodge, Harding, Lowden, Johnson, and Borah, but made no mention of Wood. It went on record as favoring a drastic revision of the League of Nations.

The delegates chosen here are believed to be the first named in the country for the party convention.

WEEKS INQUIRED INTO STOCK SALES

Talley Discloses That Justice Sought "Short" Interborough Deals by Public Officials.

FOUND NONE, SAYS McQUAID

Swann Comments on Court's Attitude Toward Prosecutor and Grand Jury.

A new feature of investigations by the Extraordinary Grand Jury was presented in court yesteday, when Chief Assistant District Attorney A. J. Talley commented upon Supreme Court Justice Week's action in directing a search of brokers' books in the financial district to learn if public officials had been selling transit securities short. At the time of this supposed suggestion by Justice Weeks the jury was inquiring into charges of conspiracy by Mayor Hylan and the District Attorney against officials and employes of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company.

Yesterday's controversy in court began when Mr. Talley made a motion opposing the suggestion by the Grand Jury on Tuesday, that only that part of its minutes relating to the transit investigation be made public at this time. Mr. Talley declared that the District Attorney contended that the public was entitled to have the entire minutes of the jury's proceedings.

"Either the entire minutes of the investigation should be made public or none of them," Talley asserted. "No other course could be pursued with honest motives——"

"I call to your attention," interposed Justice Weeks, "that the language you use is at least unwise."

"It plainly appears that all of the testimony was taken as part of the investigation of the traction charges," continued Talley. "The so-called investigation of public officers in pursuit of the 'overshadowing crime' was part of that investigation. Public statements of the Grand Jury show that to be so." He referred to the first request of the jury for special counsel, on Oct. 10, on the ground that the District Attorney's office was congested with cases.

"At that time no suggestion was made by the Grand Jury of any misconduct in the District Attorney's office," continued Mr. Talley. "Upon what did the jury or Mr. Almirall (foreman), make the insinuation of misconduct on the part of public officials? What was the basis for the charge of the overshadowing crime? Let us have all the evidence or none of it, so that this mystery and pretense may be dispelled. The public wants the truth and we wish to let them have it.

Halted By Justice Weeks.

"It is a fact, within your knowledge, that while Mr. Almirall was making the charge in such a manner as to create the impression in the public mind that evidence existed and had been developed in the traction investigation, Your Honor was holding private conferences at which no other members of the Grand Jury nor the District Attorney were present, and that Your Honor was engaged in conducting an investigation into Wall Street brokerage houses."

"Now, Mr. District Attorney," interrupted Justice Weeks, "you must cease making public statements in court in regard to the action of the court, unless supported by affidavit." Talley said he was prepared to make an affidavit, and the Court continued: "Then make it. I will not permit you to proceed any further on matters of that kind. I will require you to make affidavit if you undertake to state facts that are not truthful."

"I am stating a fact which, with great respect, is within Your Honor's knowledge."

CLEMENCEAU QUITS PRESIDENTIAL RACE; LOSING IN CAUCUS

Paul Deschanel Beats Him by 19 Votes in the Preliminary Trial of Strength.

PREMIER ACTS PROMPTLY

Writes Bourgeois That He Would Not Serve, Even if He Should Be Elected.

"NOW MY ROLE IS FINISHED"

Asks His Friends to Support Poincare, but the Latter Declines a Re-election.

PARIS, Jan. 16 (Associated Press).—Premier Clemenceau went down to defeat today in a caucus of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies to choose a candidate for the Presidency of the republic, and tonight he sent a letter to Léon Bourgeois, who will preside over the election tomorrow, formally withdrawing from the contest for the Presidency. The letter says:

"I take the liberty of informing you that I withdraw from my friends authority to offer my candidacy for the Presidency of the republic, and that if they disregard my withdrawal and obtain for me a majority of votes I will refuse the mandate so conferred."

The caucus vote resulted as follows:

|---|---|
| Premier Clemenceau | 389 |
| Charles C. A. Jonnart | 4 |
| Léon Bourgeois | 3 |
| Marshal Foch | 1 |
| President Poincaré | 16 |

M. Clemenceau has asked his supporters to cast their votes for the re-election of President Poincaré.

"Now My Role Is Finished."

Replying to a group of Ministers who brought the result of the caucus vote to M. Clemenceau, but asked him to remain a candidate for the Presidency, the Premier said:

"My resolution is definitely made and nothing can change it. I declared from the first that I did not wish to be a candidate, but could not resist the pressure of my friends. Besides, I dreamed that if elected I would be a link between the Government of yesterday and that of tomorrow, and for that task general consent is necessary.

"I submitted to M. Millerand [Alexandre Millerand, former Cabinet member prominently mentioned as successor to Premier Clemenceau] the names of three of you—you will permit me not to say which three. It was understood that it was not a question of imposing a choice on him. In fact, I warned him that I did not wish to know his opinion on those three names, leaving him entirely free. Now my rôle is finished. I am going to write M. Bourgeois a letter to let him know I am not a candidate."

M. Clemenceau this evening made the following statement to the Havas Agency:

"I did not ask anything. I did not want to be a candidate. I was told it was my duty, that the situation was difficult, that the country expected new services from me. I believed it, but I needed the general consent, which failed.

"I figure that my part is ended. I have no bad feelings toward anybody. I have no reason to be angry. I have taken my responsibilities. What more can one ask than that others assume theirs?"

Senators and Deputies, after the caucus in which Deschanel, who is President of the Chamber, led the Premier by nineteen votes, generally expressed the opinion that the vote means the elimination from public life of "The Father of Victory," Premier Clemenceau being neither a Senator nor a Deputy.

Clemenceau's friends are already searching for another candidate, as President Poincaré is reported to have refused to accede to the demand of a deputation of Senators and Deputies that he be a candidate for re-election. He is said to have renewed emphatically the expression of his determination not to be a candidate.

Still Press Poincare to Run.

Although President Poincaré has formally refused to stand for re-election to the Presidency, some officials do not give up hope that he may be induced to give his consent.

Supporters of the candidacy of Paul Deschanel hope that several candidates will be in the field for the first ballot. They desire to prevent one candidate from gathering an absolute majority so that they may force a second ballot. They express full confidence in the success of the President of the Chamber of Deputies.

Japan Invites China to Join in Parley on Shantung Return

TOKIO, Jan. 15 (Associated Press).—The Japanese Government, according to the newspapers today, sent instructions last evening to Yukichi Obata, the Minister to China, to notify the Peking Government that Japan, having succeeded to Germany's rights in Shantung on Jan. 10 by virtue of the treaty of peace, was ready now to negotiate at any time for their return.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Any action by Japan toward restoration of rights in Shantung to China at this time would be preparatory, it was said today by officials. The German Government has thirty days after ratification of the treaty to turn over to Japan documents relating to her former possessions in China.

TREATY CONFEREES ON BOTH SIDES BUSY

Lodge and His Colleagues Meet —Democrats Active in Discussions.

ANOTHER SESSION TODAY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Republican Senators who attended the bipartisan conference on the treaty yesterday met today to formulate an answer to the Democratic suggestions made to them. Another session of the conference will be held tomorrow for further discussion of details of compromise proposals.

Upon leaving the conference Senators Kellogg and Lenroot expressed the view that the conferees are on the road to an agreement. "We both think so," observed Senator Kellogg, looking to Senator Lenroot, who nodded in confirmation. "If we did not, we should not be wasting our time in conferences."

That was all the information these Senators would give concerning today's meeting. Mr. Lodge added, however, that he and his colleagues were ready to give the Democrats some sort of a statement.

It would appear that these conferees would tell the Democrats that there were some points open to discussion, as for example the preamble, but that Article X. was not discussable. Mr. Lodge's attitude appeared to be that of tolerance and amusement about the whole matter. He indicated that he would do nothing to stop the pleasant conferences, now proceeding, by becoming blunt.

There was much conferring today, and the five Democrats identified with the bipartisan movement were getting the views of colleagues on points raised at Thursday's session. At that session the Democrats submitted as compromise proposals the McKellar-Kendrick reservations and the Republicans said that they stood on the Lodge reservations. Thus two proposals are now before the conferees. Tomorrow's conference may show how much hope there is for an agreement. The crisis will come when Article X. becomes the subject of discussion. If the Republican leader proves as firm as some of his followers expect, the Democrats must yield to him or stop talking about compromise.

Some of the Democratic conferees complained today that Mr. Lodge's selection of Republicans was not what it might have been. One prominent Democrat said that Mr. Lodge has assembled "a hard boiled bunch" to meet the Democrats. He held that the Democratic conferees were earnest friends of ratification, but that the Republican group contained but one such friend, Kellogg. The others were nearly in the irreconcilable class, he thought.

Senator Hitchcock today started brief discussion of the treaty in the Senate by asking leave to print in the Record the results of the poll among college students on the ratification of the treaty. He commented on the fact that the largest vote polled, about 45 per cent., was for unqualified ratification. About 30 per cent. voted for compromise reservations, about 20 per cent. for the Lodge reservations, and less than 10 per cent. against ratification in any form. This, he said, showed a sentiment for uncompromising and unqualified ratification much stronger than he had supposed; a sentiment so strong as to cause amazement.

Mr. Hitchcock went on:

"The Rochester Times-Union a few days ago took a vote, which showed in favor of ratification without reservation, 1,706; in favor of ratification with reservations acceptable to the President, 789; in favor of ratification with the PARIS, Jan. 16.—The League of Nations is a reality. Modestly and democratically, it began to function this morning at 10:30 o'clock, when the Executive Council opened its first meeting in the Clock Room of the French Foreign Ministry.

Nine men gathered about a green covered table in one end of the salon of crimson and gold and put in motion the machinery of the most ambitious experiment in government man has ever essayed, while a hundred or more diplomats from the four corners of the earth looked on. The nine men gathered about the table started a work which may influence the lives of untold millions of humans for centuries to come.

Only America's Chair Vacant.

The sunlight, which Heaven sent to bless the day, shone full through the windows overlooking the Seine, and the sunlight threw a shadow across the green-covered table—the shadow of the empty chair. All who were there saw the shadow, remarked that the chair was empty and regretted it, and all agreed to keep the chair waiting until America should come to fill it.

Never more than today was it apparent that the League of Nations needed the United States. It did little today except to decide virtually to wait for America. There were two or three speeches; there was a perfunctory naming of the Sarre Basin Commission; there was the decision to hold the next meeting in London. That was all, and it was stated that America would be consulted about the next meeting and the business to be transacted at it.

The shadow of the empty chair grew bolder in outline when Léon Bourgeois in his speech as presiding officer said:

"Today, gentlemen, we are holding the first meeting of the Council, convened by the President of the United States. The task of presiding at this meeting and of inaugurating this great international institution should have fallen to President Wilson. We respect the reasons which will delay the final decisions of our friends in Washington, but we may all express the hope that the difficulties will soon be overcome, and that a representative of the great American Republic will occupy the place which awaits him among us. The work of the Council will then assume that definite character and that particular force which should be associated with our work."

Lord Curzon, speaking for England, concluded his address with an appeal for American participation in the League.

"While I am in entire accord," he said, "with all that M. Bourgeois has said, I should wish especially to express my full concurrence in his observations regarding the United States of America. The decision must be her own, but if and when the United States elects to take her place in the new council chamber of nations a place is vacant for her and the warmest welcome will be hers."

It was Lord Curzon, who, after London had been selected as the next meeting place of the Council, suggested that the date and program of business be left open until after Washington could be consulted.

The nine men who sat about the green-covered table were M. Bourgeois, in the centre; on his right, Lord Curzon; next, Ambassador Matsui of Japan; then M. da Conha for Brazil and Premier Venizelos for Greece. On the left of Mr. Bourgeois sat Signor Ferraris for Italy, Ambassador Quinones de Leon for Spain, and M. Hymans for Belgium. Across the table from M. Bourgeois sat Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary of the League.

Immediately after M. Bourgeois opened the meeting Premier Venizelos nominated the French representative as Permanent Chairman of the Council. Lord Curzon seconded the nomination, and

Text of the Announcement by the Supreme Council Of the Change of Policy in Regard to Russia

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The State Department announced tonight that the following official communiqué was issued this evening by the Supreme Council in Paris:

With a view to remedying the unhappy situation of the population in the interior of Russia, which is now deprived of all manufactured products from outside of Russia, the Supreme Council, after taking note of the report of a committee appointed to consider the reopening of certain trade relations with the Russian people, has decided that it would permit the exchange of goods on the basis of reciprocity between the Russian people and allied and neutral countries.

For this purpose it decided to give facilities to the Russian co-operative organizations which are in direct touch throughout Russia so that they may arrange for the import into Russia of clothing, medicines, agricultural machinery and the other necessaries of which the Russian people are in sore need, in exchange for grain, flax, &c., of which there is a surplus supply.

NONE OF OUR FORCES TO FIGHT BOLSHEVIKI

NO PART IN PARIS COUNCIL

But This Government Is Not Averse to Indirect Aid to Poles and Other Anti-Reds.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Secretary of War Baker asserted today that he personally should entertain no objection to the United States aiding Poland so long as that nation preserves its frontiers and lives up to the obligations incurred when the new nation was created.

"In my judgment," said the Secretary, "as long as the Polish Government is occupying a defensive position assigned to it and is living up to the convention by which it came into existence, it is entirely proper for the nations responsible for its existence to lend it all possible aid.

"As a matter of fact, the United States is officially giving aid to Poland by lending Colonel Alvin B. Barber to the Polish Government to aid in the direction of its railways."

While the American Government is willing to aid Poland, it is learned on excellent authority that this country will not, at least for the present, participate in the Interallied Conference at Paris, called for the consideration of military steps to be taken against the Bolshevist occupation of Transcaucasia and the Soviet menace to the Caucasus, Persia and India. Ambassador Wallace has received no instructions authorizing him to take part in the deliberations.

The American Government has been observing the growing military machine in Soviet Russia, and it is considered impracticable at this time for the American Government to furnish any military forces for checking the tide of the Red advance. Instead of contributing such forces the Government has decided on the immediate withdrawal of the American forces from Siberia.

British May Call on Japanese.

It is now considered likely in diplomatic circles here that if England and her allies should decide to take military measures against the spread of the Bolshevist military menace, an appeal may be made by the British Government to Japan, under the terms of the Anglo-Japanese alliance for the maintenance of Japanese military forces in Siberia after the withdrawal of the American forces. It was pointed out here today that if the British attack the Bolshevist forces in Russian Turkestan, and at the threshold to India and Persia, which she would probably do with the military forces in India, she would want diversions on remote fronts, so as to compel the Bolshevist commanders to meet the British front with weakened forces.

While the United States Government refuses to engage in direct hostilities with the Bolsheviki at this time, it is not averse, as shown by Secretary Baker's recommendations in the case of Poland, to lending financial and indirect military aid to the anti-Bolshevist operations. The arming of Poland would be one of the major elements in the creation of the projected cordon militaire around Bolshevist Russia, and its purpose would be to help block the projected invasion of Western Europe by the Reds. In the case of Poland, however, it was pointed out, it would be the case of an independent State meeting and resisting foreign aggression, and not of other foreign powers taking direct aggressive action against Russia.

GERMAN PROJECTS FEARED

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Jan. 17.—Information available in official quarters here with regard to the first conference held in Paris on the Russian situation is that there is no truth in the suggestion that embarkation upon another war is being contemplated. Whatever measures are decided upon will be of a defensive nature and it is extremely probable that arrangements will be arrived at with a view to concerted action by the Allies to protect Persia and the new republics. It is possible that military measures may be taken to frustrate efforts of the Bolsheviki to effect a junction with the Turks.

That a definite policy in regard to Russian Bolshevism must be determined upon speedily is generally recognized here. There are, however, the widest differences in views as to what would constitute the best policy, together with some inclination to believe that the negative and passive attitude to which the British Government pledged itself when Premier Lloyd George last spoke on the question has proved to be about the worst that could possibly have been adopted. Denikin lays most of the blame for his collapse on the British Prime Minister's announcements in his Guildhall speech.

Winston Churchill is rightly or wrongly credited with being an active interventionist in the sense that he still believes in the necessity of giving the utmost possible assistance to the Russian parties opposed to Bolshevism. Some of his political opponents go to the length of charging him with a desire to create such a position that Britain, in defense of her own direct interests, will be forced to undertake military action on her own account.

Suspect German Aid to Soviets.

For some time past sections of the English press have been striking the most alarmist notes with regard to Bolshevist designs of active attack upon the outside world. A picture has been painted of the Bolshevist armies, reinforced by hordes of Chinese, surging over Western Europe with German Generals lending the help of their military science and German engineers producing munitions and implements of war to add to what are believed to be the already abundant stores of war material in the hands of the Red armies.

Poland and other buffer States on the western borders of Russia were said to be marked out for attack in the Spring and a correspondent of The Times, who is believed to be Professor Sir Paul Vinadorveff, has pointed out that Red victory in Poland would be a victory for the Germans, who for two years past have steadily fixed their hopes upon the economic and political subjection of Soviet Russia to German domination.

Parallels were drawn between Europe after the French revolution and Europe now threatened by Russian Bolshevism. The French Committee of Public Safety,

Object Said to be to Reach the Peasants and Weaken Soviet Power.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The Allies will reopen commercial relations with the Russians at once. This momentous decision was taken here late today, and completely reverses the former allied Russian policy of a pacific blockade.

The Premiers declare that the decision implies no change in the attitude of the allied Governments toward the Soviet Government.

The text of the resolution adopted by the Supreme Council was cabled to Washington tonight. Ambassador Wallace by invitation attended the meeting of the three Premiers at which the move was made, but spoke no word.

The new move is considered as having been fathered by Lloyd George. It comes as a great surprise to diplomatic Paris, for outside of the "Big Three" the impression was that the British naval and military chiefs had been called to Paris to make war plans against the Bolsheviki.

The latest editions of the evening papers carry appeals for a military movement against the Bolsheviki, and tonight comes the announcement of the new Russian policy.

Aim to Reach the Peasants.

The only official explanation of the move is that it is intended to reach the Russian peasants and thus weaken the Soviet Government. Some statesmen say that this reasoning is not clear to them.

Although the decision was taken late today by the Supreme Council, it was first adopted by the Big Three in the presence of Mr. Wallace this morning while the Council of the League of Nations was in session. At the same meetings appeals by Georgia to be protected against the Bolsheviki was heard and no action was taken. Poland has leading statesmen at Paris pleading for military aid against the Bolshevist military peril.

The question immediately arose if there had been any negotiations with Lenin and Trotzky prior to today's decisions. No official statement on this point is to be had tonight.

Another question being asked is, have the Premiers any assurance that materials sent into Russia may not be used by the Bolsheviki to military advantage? It is understood to be the belief of the Premiers that they can deal with the Russian co-operatives without dealing with the Russian Government. Whether this is true or not, the domination of Lenin and Trotzky appears as a big problem to some statesmen.

Await View from Washington.

Americans have no comment to make upon the decision of the Allies. They say simply that it has been sent to Washington and Washington must speak. Allied statesmen expressed the opinion to me tonight that America could only agree.

The suddenness of the change gives rise to many demands for explanations by the French, who most of all the allied nations fear the Bolshevist menace and who have always joined heartily with the English in their blockade of Russian ports. It may be recalled that Washington always refused to join in this blockade,

Paris and London will await with great interest Washington's stand on the decision, although it is plain by the text of the resolution that the Allies have adopted a policy with or without American assent.

For some time the British Premier has been doubting the wisdom of sinking more allied money and material in aiding the Anti-Soviet armies. The recent overwhelming defeats of those forces have probably brought him to the decision represented in the new allied policy outlined today. It is known that Italy has been sympathetic with this view. She has not been disposed to stake anything on Kolchak, Denikin or Yudenitch.

In the consideration of the new proposition, it must be remembered that the Bolshevist armies have now reached the Black Sea and that a route is open there, since Petrograd is frozen up.

The political possibilities of the new move are so great that it is difficult to speculate upon them. While the resolution states that the Allies mean no change in their attitude toward the Soviet Government it is hard to believe that their attitude can be the same when the allied nations are doing business with the people of territories controlled by the Soviets as it was when the Allies were backing the armies fighting the Soviets.

GREAT UNION OF PEASANTS.

Russian Co-operative Society Said to Represent 20,000,000.

The Russian Co-operative Society, with which the Allies are to deal, is composed of a number of co-operative unions and is said to represent 20,000,000 Russians.

In June of last year Secretary of War Baker signed contracts with representatives of the society covering the sale of $15,000,000 worth of surplus army clothing and textiles.

In greeting the delegation which waited upon him in Washington Mr. Baker spoke of the sincere desire of the people of the United States to be of any possible assistance to the people of Russia and explained that it was the hope that when Russia had re-established its Government the "ancient bond of friendship between the two nations would be found strengthened."

REDS CLAIM SWEEP IN EASTERN SIBERIA

Moscow Says Authorities Are Fleeing from Vladivostok and Other Towns.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—All of North Siberia, beginning at Tulun (northwest of Irkutsk), and all the Lumsky district is occupied by Red forces and the Soviet Government exists everywhere, in conjunction with the Central Soviet, according to Irkutsk advices forwarded from Moscow by wireless. The Soviet statement says:

"On the night of Jan. 10 a bloodless revolution occurred at Petropaviovsk, in Kamchatka Province. All of the garrison has gone over to the people and all of the officers, heads of the districts and other officials were arrested.

"Between Vladivostok and the Ussuri region we are occupying everywhere and revolutions are expected from minute to minute.

Advices to the Lettish Legation here from Riga under yesterday's date state that a Bolshevist offensive along the Reschitza-Kreutzburg Railway on Wednesday was repulsed. The Letts counterattacked and captured some prisoners. The Letts took six villages between Dvinsk and Antopol and occupied the station of Pytalovo.

Reschitza, the advices say, is surrounded on three sides, and it is belived that if the Poles create a demonstration from the south a hurried retreat of the Bolshevist forces on this front will be caused.

WARSAW, Jan. 15.—General attacks by Bolshevist forces against Lettish and Polish positions east of the Dvinsk River have broken down after a desperate struggle in which Lettish forces played a prominent part, according to an official statement issued at General Staff Headquarters.

Polish troops launched a counter-attack and inflicted severe losses upon the enemy, it is said. An intercepted Bolshevist order indicated the attack was intended to be decisive.

BASLE, Jan. 16.—Odessa, the chief port of Russia on the Black Sea, has been occupied by the Bolsheviki, according to newspaper dispatches received here.

TREATY CONFEREES ON BOTH SIDES BUSY

Lodge reservations, 166; in favor of a compromise on reservations, 122, and in favor of rejection of the treaty, 30.

"This result corresponds closely with the poll by The Portland (Ore.) Journal. I defy any Senator to bring into the chamber any test vote that will show a favorable result for the Lodge reservations. No Senator will find on any fair test anywhere that the Lodge reservations can poll more than 25 per cent. of the votes."

Senator Smoot sought to turn Senator Hitchcock's figures against him by stating that soon after the treaty was presented to the Senate a college vote showed 90 per cent. of the students for unqualified reservation where now only about 40 per cent favored it.

Senator Hitchcock retorted that Mr. Smoot was wrong, and that the figures showed that 75 per cent. of the students favored the Democratic side in the controversy while only about 25 per cent. favored the Republican view.

Some Democratic Senators later went to Senator Hitchcock and chided him for bringing up the treaty at this time lest it revive strong feeling. Mr. Hitchcock replied that he thought it an opportunity to present to the Republicans a challenge to bring in figures showing substantial support for the Lodge program.

William J. Bryan today continued his efforts to win Senators to his plan for a Democratic walkout, to leave the Republicans in control, and let them bear responsibility for ratifying with the Lodge reservations. But he found no one enthusiastic over his proposal.

In view of the launching of the League of Nations in Paris and the Red menace Senators are watching developments abroad with interest. Some think that the Polish situation may soon test the League's power. They pointed out that although Russia is not a League member, Poland is, and, should the Bolsheviki invade Poland the League would be bound to come to Poland's help.

The situation abroad will not have the remotest effect on the treaty situation here, Senator Lodge declared today.

'GRAVE UNCERTAINTIES' SEEN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The withdrawal of American military forces from Siberia will begin after the departure of the first important contingent of Czechoslovak troops from Vladivostok, or immediately after Feb. 1.

This was disclosed this afternoon when Secretary Lansing made public the text of the aide memoire in which the decision of the American Government was communicated to the Japanese Ambassador this week.

The withdrawal of our forces is a result of the change in the Siberian military and political situation that followed the collapse of the Kolchak army and the capture of Admiral Kolchak by the Bolshevist forces before he was able to reach Irkutsk.

The decision to bring out our troops is also an answer to the communication from the Japanese Government asking this Government to define its attitude toward recent developments in Siberia. The new Ambassador at Washington, K. Shidehara, under instructions from Tokio, invited on Dec. 8 Mr. Lansing's attention to the change of conditions in Siberia, and proposed three courses for the allied and American Governments to take. These were: To maintain the status quo, to proceed with entire or partial withdrawal of the troops, to send reinforcements in case of need.

The American Government has decided to follow the second course of withdrawing its troops as soon as possible after Feb. 1, and has begun to concentrate the forces at Vladivostok. President Wilson and Secretary Lansing have decided that it is impracticable " for the United States to send reinforcements of sufficient strength in Siberia to act on the offensive in co-operation with Japan against the Bolsheviki. It has decided also that the status quo cannot be maintained without involving the United States in an undertaking that would necessitate sending large reinforcements in support of the expedition. This reduced the choice to partial or entire withdrawal, and the latter course was adopted, because the original purpose for which the troops were sent to Siberia, that of aiding the Czechoslovak forces to leave, will be accomplished soon.

Secretary Lansing's statement follows:

"Decision of the United States Government to withdraw its troops from Eastern Siberia was announced by the Department of State today. Under instructions from his Government, the Japanese Ambassador at Washington, on Dec. 8, invited the attention of the Secretary of State to the recent unfavorable development of the situation in Siberia, and inquired whether the United States proposed to maintain the status quo or to proceed to entire or partial withdrawal of its troops, or whether it was ready to send reinforcements in case of need.

Text of the Note to Japan.

"The Secretary of State has communicated to the Japanese Ambassador the decision of this Government. The full text of the communication follows:

"'The Government of the United States has given the most careful consideration to the subject matter of the communication from the Japanese Government which was read to the Secretary of State by the Japanese Ambassador on the 8th day of December, and which concerns the recent unfavorable development of the military situation with which Admiral Kolchak's forces have been confronted, and which proposes three alternative courses for the allied and associated powers to take.

"'The Government of the United States agrees that for it to send a reinforcement of sufficient strength and to act on the offensive in co-operation with anti-Bolshevist forces is impracticable.

"'The Government of the United States believes that for it to continue to participate in, guarding the districts now under allied military protection is also, under present conditions, impracticable, for the reason that an agreement to send reinforcements to such extent as may be required, with a view to maintain the status quo, might involve the Government of the United States in an undertaking of such indefinite character as to be inadvisable. The amount of reinforcement, which might become necessary for the execution of such an agreement might be so great that the Government of the United States would not feel justified in carrying it out.

"'Consideration has been given, therefore to the alternative presented by the Government of Japan of entire or partial withdrawal. It will be recalled that the purposes of the expedition, as originally conceived by the United States and expressed in an aide memoire handed to the Japanese Ambassador at Washington, July 17, 1918, were, first, to help the Czechoslovak troops, which had during their retirement along the Siberian railway been attacked by the Bolsheviki and enemy prisoners of war in Siberia, to consolidate their forces and effect their repatriation by way of Vladivostok, and second, to steady any efforts at self-government or self-defense, in which the Russians themselves might be willing to accept assistance.

"'Now only are the Czechoslovak troops now successfully advancing into Eastern Siberia, but an agreement has been effected between the Governments of Great Britain and the United States providing for their repatriation from Vladivostok. American vessels will begin to arrive at that port by Feb. 1 and a contingent of more than 10,000 Czechoslovak troops can be immediately embarked. It is expected that evacuation will proceed rapidly thereafter and from that date the first purpose for which American soldiers were sent to Siberia may be regarded as accomplished.

"'With respect to the second purpose, namely, the steadying of efforts at self-government or self-defense on the part of the Russians, the Government of the United States is impressed with the political instability and grave uncertainties of the present situation in Eastern Siberia as described in the aide memoire presented by the Japanese Ambassador on Dec. 8, and is disposed to the view that further military effort to assist the Russians in the struggle toward self-government may, in the present situation, lead to complications which would have exactly the opposite effect, prolonging possibly the period of readjustment and involving Japan and the United States in ineffective and needless sacrifices. It is felt accordingly to be unlikely that the second purpose for which American troops were sent to Siberia will be longer served by their presence there.

"'In view, then, of the fact that the main purposes for which American troops were sent to Siberia are now at an end, and of the considerations set forth in the communication of the Japanese Government of Dec. 8, which subsequent events in Eastern Siberia have strengthened, the Government of the United States has decided to begin at once arrangements for the concentration of the American forces at Vladivostok with a view to their embarkation and departure immediately after the leaving of the first important contingent of Czechoslovak troops, that is to say, about Feb. 1.

"'Careful consideration has also been given to the possibility of continuing, after the departure of the American troops, the assistance of American railway experts in the operation of the Trans-Siberian and Chinese Eastern Railways. It will be recalled that it is expressly stipulated in the plan for the supervision of these railways, which was submitted by the Japanese Ambassador at Washington, Jan. 15, 1919, that the arrangement should cease upon the withdrawal of the foreign military forces from Siberia, and that all foreign railway experts appointed under the arrangement should then be recalled forthwith.

"'The experience of recent months in the operation of the railways under conditions of unstable civil authority and frequent local military interference furnishes a strong reason for abiding by the terms of the original agreement. Arrangements will be made accordingly for the withdrawal of the American railway experts under the same conditions and simultaneously with the departure of the American military forces.

"'The Government of the United States desires the Japanese Government to know that it regrets the necessity for this decision, but it seems to mark the end, for the time being at least, of a co-operative effort by Japan and the United States to assist the Russian people, which had of late begun to bear important results and seemed to give promise for the future. The Government of the United States is most appreciative of the friendly spirit which has animated the Government of Japan in this undertaking, and is convinced that the basis of understanding which has been established will serve in the future to facilitate the common efforts of the two countries to deal with the problems which confront them in Siberia. The Government of the United States does not in the least relinquish the deep interest which it feels in the political and economic fate of the people of Siberia nor its purpose to co-operate with Japan in the most frank and friendly way in all practical plans which may be worked out for the political and economic rehabilitation of that region.

"'It is suggested that the Government of Japan may desire to communicate to the other principal allied and associated Governments the substance of the aide memoire of Dec. 8. This Government will likewise make known to them the substance of the present communication.'"

SAY REDS PLANNED A REIGN OF TERROR

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—Had the police guards posted at Portal 2 of the Reichstag delayed only a few seconds longer firing at the infuriated mob on Tuesday the latter would have invaded the hall where the National Convention is in session and then, as Chancellor Bauer said in his speech today, "There would have been another massacre of Saint Bartholomew. You members all have to thank that handful of brave men who despite outrageous insults and bodily attacks patiently withstood the tempest until it became absolutely necessary to use their firearms."

But not only would the National Convention have changed into a slaughter house from which only the Independent Socialist members might have escaped, but, as investigation reveals, the rebels intended to break loose all over the city and had planned to give up certain districts entirely to plunder by the fury maddened masses. This was intended as a signal for a rising all over Germany wherewith to initiate the rule of Bolshevism. The police have evidence that this plan existed and today made numerous arrests of persons who were implicated or are suspected.

Unfortunately they cannot arrest the two principally guilty ones, Frau Zietz and Herr Zeubeil, as members of the National Convention enjoy immunity, though as proved by many witnesses they and other independent members are directly responsible for the bloodshed in front of the Reichstag because they directed the attack from the windows and tried to persuade the guards not to shoot, but to open the doors and admit the mob. There is irrefutable evidence that the leaders of the masses outside were in constant connection with the Independent members inside the house who gave the signal for the attack when the convention itself was in a terrible turmoil caused by anarchist sympathizers in the gallery and on the floor, which they evidently considered the most opportune moment for the raid. Had they succeeded all Germany would probably be under the rule of a bloody terror before these lines reach America.

Thanks to the brave guards of Portal the situation was saved once more at a critical moment, and today everything seems to be quiet. But the dangers are not yet over. The police know that many depots of arms are secreted by the anarchists in the centre of the city, and they have raided some of them. The Government is absolutely determined to make use of all the means it possesses to suppress any further revolts, no matter what the cost of blood and life, and doubtless an overwhelming majority of the German people will be armed to not submit to a proletarian dictatorship without a fight. The suppression of the Independent and Communist organ, the Red Flag, has robbed the leaders of the rebellion of their best organ to communicate their plans to the Red hordes who by tomorrow they had hoped would have Berlin at their mercy. All important strategic points and places are protected by barbed wire, soldiers and machine guns. Jewelry shops are closed and all else like public buildings are guarded by soldiers. Wide cordons were drawn around the Reichstag Building reaching deep into the Tiergarten, which nobody can pass without proper identification.

Indiana Ratifies Woman Suffrage.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 16.—The Federal amendment for woman suffrage was ratified by both houses of the Indiana Legislature, meeting in special session, here today. In the Senate the vote was 43 to 3 and in the House 90 to 0. Indiana is the twenty-sixth State to ratify the amendment.

GERMAN RAILWAY STRIKERS RETURN

BERLIN MOB LEADERS HELD

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The strikers on the German railways have resumed work in a majority of the districts, says a Central News dispatch from Berlin today. The men, it is said, received wage increases of 200 marks monthly, while the salaries of officials were increased 150 per cent. These increases, it is stated, will bring about a deficit of an additional 1,500,000,000 marks for the railways, which will probably lead to another increase in rates.

Reports received here by the Exchange Telegrauh Company from Amsterdam, also quote Berlin dispatches as saying that the railroad strike in the Rhine and Westphalia regions has ended and that service has been resumed.

A dispatch from Essen says several persons have been killed and wounded in disturbances at Duisburg, Steckrade and other towns in the industrial district, where 20,000 miners are striking. The Düsseldorf region has been declared under a strict state of siege.

Troops have intervened at Frankfort to enforce orders prohibiting an independent Socialist demonstration protesting against the "assassins of Berlin."

BERLIN, Jan. 15.—Attempts of radical labor leaders to provoke a general strike today as a protest against the shooting of members of the mob which stormed the Reichstag Building on Tuesday failed completely. At 1 o'clock this afternoon the inner city presented its usual aspect. A few of the largest shops where radicals predominate were shut down, but there were no street crowds visible in the downtown centres.

In many large industrial plants there were sharp clashes between Majority Socialist labor leaders, who opposed a general strike, and Independent Socialist and Communist agitators. Gustav Noske, Minister of Defense, announced drastic penalties would be inflicted upon any who attempt to interfere with troops or with machinery or news which are protecting public utilities.

Proceedings against leaders of the mob which stormed the Reichstag Building, as well as those responsible for the proclamation that brought the crowds into the streets, have been begun by the State's Attorney. Fifteen arrests have already been made.

As a result of Tuesday's disorders, the Freiheit has been indefinitely suppressed. The Government does not propose to raise the embargo on the paper until the Independents give substantial guarantees that they will cease their incendiary propaganda.

It is now proposed to establish a "parliamentary guard" for the general protection of the National Assembly, which, in addition to maintaining order outside the building where the Assembly meets, will be at the disposal of the President for the subjugation of obstreperous members.

Notwithstanding the Government's order prohibiting such gatherings, a memorial meeting for those killed in the revolutionary outbreak last year was held in the Communist Hall today. The assemblage numbered 10,000 persons, but there was only one minor clash, the security police having taken efficient measures to preserve order.

The Assembly adjourned this evening after having devoted nine hours to a discussion of the shop councils measure. As each paragraph was taken up individually the debate resolved itself into a long-drawn-out controversy, both the Right Party and the Independents offering substitute amendments which were rejected by the Coalition.

When a recess was taken until Friday, paragraph 25 had been disposed of. The real fight in the chamber centres around provisions giving workers an insight into the balance sheets of companies and the privilege for their members to sit on the boards of companies. The bill comprises 600 paragraphs.

SINN FEINERS ABUSE THE LEAGUE AS BRITISH

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—After the meeting of the Council of the League of Nations Sean O'Ceallaigh [John O'Kelly] and G. Gavan Duffy, representatives at Paris of the Sinn Feinera, sent to Lord Curzon at the Hotel Ritz a letter denouncing the League as an instrument of British oppression. They made the usual argumentative use of America's abstention.

"First—Because it is an engine of empire designed to secure and perpetuate the hegemony of England throughout both hemispheres.

"Second—Because it is a monument of English hypocrisy, entombing the liberties of millions of men in Ireland, Egypt, Dutch South Africa, Persia, India and the Far East.

"Third—Because as the Areopagus of the world it lacks authority and sanction; it is illusory and partial; it is founded on English discrimination against England's enemies and victims and is dominated by English control.

The letter adds:

"The constitution of this English-made League of Nations as it stands is a subtle English scheme to obtain from other Governments moral sanction for the English claim to hold and keep control of the peoples and territories which in past centuries and recent days England has won by fraud or bloody conquest added to her empire."

ACCUSED OF MELTING COIN.

Six Arraigned in London for Breaking Up Sovereigns.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Six persons, including Harry Lewis, a barrister, and Shure and Chamberlain, diamond merchants, were today arraigned in Bow Street Police Court on a charge of melting and breaking up gold coin. They were arrested yesterday under the provisions of the Defense of the Realm act.

Gold amounting to thousands of pounds sterling has recently been withdrawn from the Bank of England for illegal purposes, according to The Daily Mail. Gold is now worth about £5 11s. per ounce, which is in excess of the face value of a sovereign, and The Mail asserts that gold valued at several thousands of pounds was found in the houses of the persons under arrest.

THREE OFFENSES ARE CITED

Treaty-Breaking by Invasion of Belgium and Permitting U-Boat and Poison Gas Warfare.

BY EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—A summons to Holland to hand over the former Kaiser for trial was handed to the Dutch Minister at Paris tonight. It was accompanied by a copy of the indictment against Wilhelm, approved by the three Premiers yesterday. The British describe the summons as a demand; the French call it a request.

It calls the attention of The Hague Government to the fact that the ex-Kaiser is not accused of crime as a felon, whose case would be covered by extradition treaties, but of a moral offense which stands above legal technicalities.

Three of the counts of the indictment cite as offenses committed by the German Emperor the breaking of a treaty by the invasion of Belgium and the authorization of U-boat warfare, and the use of poison gas.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Reports from Paris that the Supreme Council has drawn up a formal request to the Dutch Government to hand over the ex-Kaiser for trial, made in accordance with the terms of the Peace Treaty, are confirmed in official circles here. The request will be dispatched to The Hague by courier.

Dispatches from English correspondents in Paris, who are presumably in touch with the British leaders there, say that the Entente Powers are fully aware that the request, based upon Article 100 of the Treaty of Versailles, which, of course, is not binding on Holland, will lead to considerable negotiation and may end by creating diplomatic tension with the Dutch Government.

Official circles in London take the contrary view and confidently expect that after a formal protest Holland will comply with the request, Germany by her ratification of the treaty having thereby assented to his extradition.

Though the note is couched in friendly terms, approved by Premiers Lloyd George, Clemenceau, and Nitti, it is nevertheless firm. In addition, a list of war criminals whose surrender is demanded, drawn up and revised with the utmost care by the British Attorney General, is ready for presentation to Germany. Sir Gordon Hewart, having completed this highly responsible and novel task, has returned to this country.

It is understood that the revision of the list was made first, because of the representations of the German Government that the handing over of so large a number as that originally included would lead to something akin to revolution, and, secondly, with a view to making certain that the evidence against each and every culprit was beyond dispute.

It is said that when the selected war criminals are arraigned for trial there will be hardly a loophole for them to escape a verdict of guilty.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—In an interview tonight Foreign Minister Trumbich of Jugoslavia declared that his Government accepted the proposed Adriatic settlement making Fiume a free city with a port and railroad under the League of Nations, except for the provision giving Italy a narrow strip of land along the coast between her Istrian boundary and the city. He said negotiations would begin tomorrow on this Italian demand, which he called unnecessary.

The Italians, on the other hand, say that Italian Fiume, even if it is technically a free city, should not be cut off from Italy by Jugoslav territory.

TAFT EXPECTS COMPROMISE

Says Bipartisan Conference Was a Hopeful Sign.

Special to The New York Times.

OWOSSO, Mich., Jan. 16.—Former President Taft, passing through here today, declared that the conference on Thursday between Republican and Democratic Senators on the ratification of the Peace Treaty was the most hopeful sign of an imminent compromise that he had seen thus far in the fight over the treaty.

"They have apparently begun to realize that they must get together some time, and that compromise won't hurt either side," said the former President. "The Anglo-Saxon idea of government is founded on the principle of compromise. No public official can have his own way all the time."

Arrange Germany's Food Supply.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—Negotiations have been opened between Germany and the Allies for the conclusion of an agreement regarding food supplies for the months of March and April, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Amsterdam.

LEAGUE COUNCIL STARTS

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

M. Bourgeois was unanimously chosen. He then formally installed Sir Eric as Permanent Secretary.

M. Bourgeois saw Lord Grey in the audience and paid a tribute to him as a lasting friend of peace, and invited him to sit with the Council. Later Lord Grey took a seat at a table near one of the Secretaries, and in a few words thanked M. Bourgeois for the compliments paid him.

It was significant of the dawn of a new political era that this council of statesmen was so largely attended. It had the effect of robbing the session of some of the dignity which has usually attended the meetings of statesmen.

The Clock Room was crowded to the doors, with many standing, so that the green-covered table and its nine seats were almost obscured. Lloyd George was among the spectators, and so were some stenographers attending unofficially. The crowd was democratic and mixed in its makeup. Men of all colors and of all stations in life saw the League start. Therefore the seeming lack of dignity might be a virtue rather than a fault.

Wallace Not in Attendance.

It was remarked that not one American official was to be noticed in all the attendance, although Ambassador Wallace had been invited. The addresses of the statesmen were modest and lacking in flamboyant oratory. The translator who repeated the speeches displayed more elocutionary gifts than the statesmen, who read their speeches. It was more like a board meeting of a great corporation than a gathering of statesmen, and it was more of a board meeting than it was a political assemblage.

M. Bourgeois, a big man, the picture of dignity with his white hair and beard, began by announcing that President Wilson had convoked the League as he was empowered to do in the covenant. Then he reviewed the framing of the League and remarked that its organization would not be complete until after the first meeting of the Assembly. He added that of the thirteen neutrals invited to become members of the League Spain, Argentine, Uruguay, Chile, and Persia has accepted. Then he said:

"Jan. 16, 1920, will go down to history as the date of the birth of the New World. The decision to be taken today will be in the name of all the States which adhere to the covenant. It will be the first decision of all the free nations leaguing themselves together for the first time in the history of the world to substitute right for wrong."

M. Bourgeois then made a plea for patience with the League, if the world were disappointed in its first achievement it must remember that each act, however small, was great in its significance.

Lord Curzon began by expressing the belief of the British Empire that alone through the League "can we hope to insure that such horrors and miseries as the world has experienced in the last five years shall not be repeated, and that a new era of international relationship shall dawn."

He laid emphasis on his words when he said:

"The League of Nations is an expression of the universal desire for a saner method of regulating the affairs of mankind. It is not a mere expression in platonic language of the necessity for international friendship and good understanding. It provides the machinery by which practical effect may be given to these principles."

He paid special attention to the objection to the League on the ground that it constituted a super-State when he said: "The very title 'The League of Nations' should be sufficient to dispel this misconception. The League does not interfere with nationality; it is upon the fact of nationhood that it rests."

He then referred at length to the recent labor conference at Washington as evidence that the agencies of the League would work.

Ambassador da Cunha of Brazil laid emphasis upon the honor he felt in being the only representative of the Western Hemisphere in the Council. He said he felt empowered to say that he represented not only Brazil, but the Pan American Union.

Signor Ferraris said that Italy entered in the best spirit into the work of the League, and that the Rome Government had the fullest confidence in the ultimate success of the great project.

The English, Japanese and Belgian members of the Sarre Basin Commission were then named. France and Germany will name the other two. This business done, London was chosen as the next meeting place, and M. Bourgeois declared the meeting adjourned.

BALLOT IN COLLEGES FAVORS COMPROMISE

48,232 OPPOSE ANY CHANGE

The most comprehensive canvass on the League of Nations and the treaty since President Wilson brought the document to the United States was completed yesterday by the Intercollegiate Treaty Referendum of 150 Nassau Street. It was disclosed in the completed result that 410 colleges had participated in the referendum and that 158,078 opinions from students and Faculty had been obtained. The canvass penetrated to every section of the country and practically every State is included in the result.

As originally submitted, the referendum covered six propositions, and 48,125 ballots in 89 colleges were registered on this basis. Later the referendum was limited to four propositions, 114,953 votes being cast in 311 colleges on this basis. For both sets of propositions, of 158,078 ballots 61,494 favored a compromise to permit immediate ratification, 48,232 opposed any reservations, 27,970 expressed themselves for the Lodge program, 13,943 favored killing the treaty and the League, and 6,449 would negotiate a new treaty with Germany.

The preponderant vote in the four proposition basis was given to Proposition 4, favoring a compromise between the Lodge and Democratic reservations in order to facilitate the ratification of the treaty. This received a combined Faculty and student vote of 44,789 out of a total number of 114,953 votes cast. The vote on the proposition was:

Proposition 1—I favor the ratification of the League and treaty without reservations and amendments. Faculty, 3,945; students, 33,490.

Proposition 2—I am opposed to the ratification of the League and treaty in any form. Faculty, 486; students, 11,073.

Proposition 3—I favor ratification of the treaty, but only with the Lodge reservations. Faculty, 1,244; students, 19,917.

Proposition 4—I favor a compromise between the Lodge and the Democratic resolutions in order to facilitate the ratification of the treaty. Faculty, 4,352; students, 40,437.

On the original basis of six propositions the first, for ratification without amendments, got 10,788 votes.

The sixth proposition read: "I favor a compromise on the reservations of such a character as will avoid the danger of defeating ratification while making clear that America can only be involved in war by a declaration of Congress. That domestic questions and the Monroe Doctrine are entirely outside of the jurisdiction of the League. That plural votes of any member are all disqualified in the event of a dispute wherein we are disqualified from voting, and that on deciding to withdraw we are to be the judge of whether our obligations have been met."

The faculty vote on this proposition was 929, while the student cast a total affirmative vote of 10,912.

The vote on the others was:

Proposition 5, which read: "I favor the Government proceeding to make peace with Germany at once and leaving the question of a League of Nations to be settled afterwards," received the votes of 257 of the Faculty and 6,192 students.

NEW STRIKES IN ITALY; BACK TO WORK IN SPAIN

ROME, Jan. 15.—A strike of postal, telegraph and telephone workers began today.

Only 80 per cent. of the workers in Rome left their posts, while at Naples only 50 per cent. struck. Reduced service, with the co-operation of the army and navy, will be undertaken by the Government.

The general population strongly condemns the strike, holding that it is not due to economic necessity, but is merely an internal affair and will not cause serious disturbance. The efforts of the strikers to obtain the assistance of the railwaymen have failed thus far.

MADRID, Jan. 16.—The miners' strike at Linares has ended. Employes in the city departments of Gijon, who have been on strike, have also decided to resume work.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 15.—State employes who had been on strike resumed work this morning, the Premier having promised that members of the Ministry would consider the question of salaries as they pertained to their respective departments.

CLEMENCEAU QUITS PRESIDENTIAL RACE

representative in the League of Nations, would announce his candidacy should there be a split in the first balloting, but one of his adherents later denied this.

There was much discussion among the Deputies in the Chamber lobby on the results of today's balloting. Even the friends of M. Deschanel expressed their surprise.

When Premier Clemenceau was informed of the balloting he declared he was not in the least cast down, but rejoiced. He said he would take a rest in his native town.

Intense Interest in the Caucus.

Never before in the history of Presidential elections in France has a plenary caucus been attended by so large a number of Deputies and Senators, 821 out of 924 being present. Heretofore it has been the custom to call a caucus only of the parties of the Left, but today M. Deschanel stands as the chosen candidate of both the Chamber and Senate—all to parties.

Neither Premier Clemenceau nor M. Deschanel was present at the caucus, but ex-Premier Briand, André Lefèvre and Edouard Herriot, the latter the new President of the Radical party, were conspicuous marshaling the Deschanel forces, while Georges Mandel, formerly Premier Clemenceau's confidential secretary, and Edouard Ignace were canvassing on behalf of M. Clemenceau.

The voting began sluggishly at 2 o'clock, but at 3 o'clock an avalanche of Senators and Deputies descended upon the voting place and the polling became brisk and excited. Those presiding at the voting table were fairly swamped by the venerable Senators and young Deputies anxious to cast their votes before the polling closed at 4 o'clock. A few bets were recorded, with M. Clemenceau the pronounced favorite.

There were, of course, naturally, cases of the defeat of the Premier, who, for more than two years, by his forceful personality and courage, had ruled both houses of the Parliament with an iron hand. One of the Senators who was opposed to the Premier remarked:

"M. Clemenceau has been victorious against many attacks in the Chamber and Senate in the last two years. This was because he was fighting for France. When he seeks personal honors, however, he goes down to defeat."

On the other hand, many of the Deputies and Senators who had supported the Premier lingered in the courtyard of the Luxembourg after the close of the balloting, sadly commenting upon the outcome.

"Berlin will illuminate tonight," said one of this group, while others of the participants in the balloting were making their way homeward manifesting their exultation by singing and shouting.

The present contest between M. Clemenceau and M. Deschanel for the Presidency recalls the fact that they have already met on another field—that of honor—twenty-six years ago. Then, when Clemenceau was neither a Deputy nor a Senator, he wrote an article in his newspaper, La Justice, criticising M. Deschanel for an interpellation made against the Brisson Ministry on the law against anarchists.

M. Deschanel, offended by the terms of the article, sent his seconds to M. Clemenceau, who was noted as a duellist. The men met with swords, and Deschanel received a wound over the eye which was so severe that the seconds would not permit the duel to continue.

BRITISH DIVIDED ON RUSSIAN DANGER

It was argued, began its career of conquest because it could not disband its armies and could not pay them. Similarly Bolshevist hordes, it is asserted, would be turned on Western Europe and bidden to help themselves.

That a new leader might come out of Russia possessed of military genius which would enable him to repeat the success of Napoleon in war-worn countries was suggested as a not unlikely eventuality.

Following the delineation of this aspect of the Bolshevist menace came reports of dangers from the Red penetration in an eastward direction. This latter possibility has stirred the British Government, and to a certain extent British public opinion more deeply. J. O. Wardrop, British Commissioner to the new Republic of Azerbaijan, has been particularly pressing in his exposition of the danger from Bolshevist propaganda among the peoples of Transcaucasia and the threat to India implied by the Red extension eastward.

Maurice Warns of Eastern Danger.

General Sir Frederick Maurice, who is not among the alarmists, has admitted that "it is obvious that a spirit is moving on the surface of eastern waters, and when that is so no wise man prophesies the outcome." Incidentally General Maurice does not believe "in great Bolshevist military enterprises in the East unless we force such enterprises upon them. If, however, we shut Russia off from the West and remain, in fact, at war with Bolshevism, we must be prepared to fight in the East."

Parenthetically it is suggested that American assistance in solving the problems is not expected to be great and some comments heard here are regretful of comparisons between the energy displayed by the United States in cleaning up its own house and its apparent reluctance to assist other peoples in safeguarding theirs.

British public opinion is very much in the dark regarding the Russian situation and its counsellors in the press are pointing out very different roads to the solution. Labor papers and some radical papers bitterly arraign what they call the jingo press. One of the former suggests that "the atrocity campaign which has been growing more and more virulent and violent has obviously inspired artillery preparation for new wars."

"In plain English," the article continues, "the coalition has failed and it is preparing to drag us into vast new military adventures involving an illimitable expenditure. We are paying the price of our stupidity in waging war against the Soviet Government in Russia."

Fear Another Gigantic War.

The so-called jingo press, on the other hand, is insistent that unless the fullest support is given to "our friends in Russia," and if Poland is attacked also, "our sons in twenty years' time will have to fight another war more gigantic than the last."

More moderate Liberal opinion admits that if the Bolsheviki are on the aggressive, vigorous military measures must be taken, but has some doubts as to "whether the new extension that seems likely to be immediately given to our war with the Bolsheviki is not in reality a mere sequel to the persistent continuance of a state of war on our part in Russia."

Some Liberal papers support a proposal made by Lord Robert Cecil that the Council of the League of Nations should offer to the Soviet Government to raise the blockade on condition that a commission appointed by the League should go to Russia to investigate conditions and frame a settlement. Litvinoff's negotiations with O'Grady at Copenhagen, which have now been reopened, are, it is reported, tending to take on a considerably enlarged scope from the question of the exchange of prisoners, which the British M. P. was in the first instance authorized to deal with. In some quarters it has been suggested that Cecil's League of Nations scheme is under discussion.

Such a step would relieve the Governments which have declared their firm intention to hold no parley with murderers, but, on the other hand, it is objected that though the Council of the League has been actually convoked by President Wilson, and has held its first sitting in Paris, the League has not yet been established on a sufficiently representative basis, and cannot be accepted as a complete organization with adequate machinery and power until it has been ratified

Teller's Disdain for a Tiresome Joke Gives Time for Bandit's Nerve to Ooze.

David Sands, Paying Teller and Assistant Secretary of the Manhattan Savings Institution, on the northeast corner of Bleecker Street and Broadway, was standing at his window at 11 o'clock yesterday morning counting over a $1 bill and some small change of his own, which he had in a pill-box, when a gruff voice on the other side of the metal grille work growled at him: "Give me $5,000 and give it to me quick."

Sands went on adding up the dimes, quarters and nickels, without looking up. He thought, as he afterwards explained, that it was one of the playful customers of the bank, who frequently bark out: "Give me $10,000" or "Give me a million dollars" by way of a jovial greeting to their friend, the teller. Mr. Sands is so hardened to this form of witticism that it doesn't even bore him any more.

The demand for $5,000 was repeated in a louder tone, but again failed to draw the teller's attention away from the nickels and dimes. According to the teller, it was not until the fourth call from the hold-up man that he realized that the demand for $5,000 was not the familiar chestnut. Then he peered through his thick-lensed glasses in the direction of the now much-exasperated speaker.

About three feet from his eyes the muzzle of a revolver was sticking through the heavy steel netting which protects the window. Behind the gun was a very short man with a much irritated and perplexed expression on his face. His plan to hold up the paying teller and force him to pay over the money before the transaction was observed by others was already spoiled because of the calmness of the teller to this style of approach. By this time others had observed the stranger's curious conduct and the chance for a quiet haul was gone.

As soon as he saw the pistol, Sands dropped behind the counter, putting his hand to his hip as he did so and shouting: "Boys, get your guns."

All Armed and Trained to Shoot.

The hold-up man did not shoot and seemed utterly bewildered after being first ignored and then baffled by the teller's disappearance. In an instant, the four men in the cage occupied by the receiving and paying tellers had their weapons out. Every person in the bank was armed. The Manhattan Savings Institution is a corporation with a memory, in which stands out boldly the date of Oct. 27, 1878, when the Jimmy Hope gang broke in and stole $2,500,000 in registered bonds, $75,000 in coupon bonds and $11,000 in cash. The recollection of this has been kept fresh and vivid through generations of bank officials since that time. As if in training for the day of revenge, the bank has basement quarters fifty-foot range for pistol practice, where the employes are encouraged to put in their spare time.

When the paying teller dropped out of sight, the robber turned the muzzle of his revolver toward Samuel A. Swart, Jr., the receiving teller, who was at that time taking money for deposit from a retired policeman named Hatch. Mr. Swart has also developed deafness to the hoarse jests of customers and gave no attention to the incident at the paying teller's window until he heard Sands shout. The receiving teller turned at the shout to see the revolver pointing at him with the short man behind it, only the top of his face visible over the marble counter.

"You give me $5,000," shouted the bandit. Stung to fury by the inattention of the bank employes, he fired a shot into the ceiling to show that his weapon was no toy and that he meant business. A second after he fired a bullet came past his ear from a different direction, puncturing the plate glass of the window looking out upon Broadway.

The bandit had been facing to the south as he stood before the paying teller's window. Sands had been standing opposite, facing north until he disappeared beneath the counter.

Receiving Teller Swart had been facing west, looking out toward Broadway, until he turned on hearing the shot. Evidently under the impression that he had only to deal with the men in the cage, the bandit had crouched behind the marble counter, to present the smallest possible target to them, leaving the left side of his body exposed to fire from the Liberty bond window, which faces west and commands a view of those standing in front of the paying teller's window.

The bandit fired again, after the bullet whistled by him, his second shot hitting the ceiling. The bullet from the Liberty bond window relieved the tensions for Swart, who had been covered by the hold-up man's revolver, until his attention was drawn by the new enemy.

H. J. Molloy, the bond teller, who had taken the bandit by surprise, fired two more shots, both missing the holdup man and making neat holes in the plate glass. According to Molloy, he only had four cartridges in the revolver, and in his excitement he thought that he had fired them all. He started to reload, but his gun jammed, and he hurt his hand in his frantic efforts to put in more cartridges.

The bandit had in the meantime turned with his weapon in Molloy's direction, and the bond teller got out of range. He rushed to a telephone and tried to call Police Headquarters.

"I made tremendous efforts to get Central," he said, "but I could not raise her. Then I ran to another telephone and tried again, but I could not get Central."

After Molloy had gone to the telephone, the bandit turned back to the men in the cage and shouted demands again for $5,000

Sands and Kelly, behind the counter, manoeuvred cautiously for a chance to take a shot at the bandit. Swart and his assistant, G. Kenneth Hayward, fortified behind a steel filing cabinet, waited for the bandit to make himself a target. The holdup man, crouching so that the hand which held the revolver and rested on the marble counter was raised slightly above his head, was evidently looking for some one to shoot at when a new enemy arrived.

This was Constant M. Bird, President of the bank. He started up from his desk in the rear office when the first shot was fired, made his way through a door adjoining the Liberty bond window and walked toward the bandit, covering him with a revolver and shouting, "Throw up your hands."

The holdup man, who seemed to be overcome by the excitement, did not change his posture, but slowly disengaged his fingers from the weapon, which was resting on the counter, and lifted his hands above his head.

In the meantime the ex-policeman, who had been depositing money, ran into Broadway and called to Traffic Policeman John Shanley, who is on duty at the centre of the Bleecker Street-Broadway intersection. Before Hatch could explain, the shots in the bank told what was going on. Realizing that the affair might be over before he could get there, Shanley ran to the window on Broadway and climbed up on the base stone, hoping to get a shot at the bandit through the plate glass. A desk and a flag hung on the inside of the window interfered with his view, so he dropped down and ran into the bank through the revolving doors of the main entrance. By the time he arrived the bandit was unarmed and had his hands thrust into the air.

The prisoner was a stocky man, five feet one and a half inches tall, with a curvature of the spine which gave him the appearance of a hunchback. When he took off a brown soft hat to mop his brow, which was pouring perspiration, he revealed a cotton bandage which had been placed over a scalp wound. He was fairly well dressed except for the absence of a collar and cravat. He was very shaky, a condition which he explained later was due, not to fright, but to heavy drinking.

Policeman Shanley and the prisoner recognized each other at once. The man was James Stratton, an ex-convict, who had been brought up in the lower part of Manhattan, and had known the policeman for years. Stratton greeted his official captor with great relief.

When he was questioned about the crime he said:

"I did it all myself. I didn't have anybody with me. I don't know where I got the idea, except that I needed the money badly. What is the good of talking about it. I'm ready to take my medicine. I don't think I could put up much defense."

Stratton carried a card of the Teamsters' Union. The detectives learned that he had been under investigation recently at the West Fifty-eighth Street Police Station, because of the disappearance of several boxes of goods from a truck which he was driving.

Stratton was arrested in 1916 on a charge of shooting at a policeman and sent to Blackwell's Island for an indeterminate sentence. After his release on parole, he was sent back to the Island for failure to report. He was finally released more than a year ago. He said he had spent several months working in a metal plant at Hammond, Ind.

The burglary of the Manhattan Savings Institution in 1878 was accomplished by the Jimmy Hope gang with the connivance of the policeman on the beat and the bank watchman. It was several years before all the members of the gang were rounded up and sent to prison, and for twenty years afterward bonds stolen from the institution came to light in different parts of the country and were confiscated.

MAY CALL MARTENS AGAINST SOCIALISTS

Albany Reports a Move to Connect the Suspended Assemblymen with Russian "Reds."

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Ludwig C. L. K. Martens, the Russian Soviet Government's self-styled "ambassador" to the United States, and other alleged radical "Reds" now awaiting deportation at Ellis Island, may be haled before the Assembly Judiciary Committee early in its trial of the five suspended New York Socialists, in an attempt to prove connection of the Socialists and their party with the Moscow Internationale, it was reported here tonight.

If, as will be attempted, a definite connecting link is established through use as witnesses of these "Reds," sufficient evidence that the suspended Socialists are sworn through their constitution to aid "the overthrow of constituted government" will be adduced, it is claimed, to sustain the ousting charges. If the prosecution succeeds in establishing this connection, criminal charges constituting a felony will be made against the suspended members, legislators here say.

Harry W. Haines, sergeant-at-arms of the Assembly, who went to New York to serve some 50 subpoenas on witnesses who will testify for the prosecution, returned to Albany late this afternoon.

The Socialist Party constitution will be the principal evidence used by Attorney General Charles D. Newton and his assistant prosecutors to prove that the suspended Socialists are unfit, constitutionally, to sit as members of the State Assembly. The prosecution thus hopes to establish that the five Socialists are sworn to uphold the constitution of a political organization and not the State Constitution; that the suspended Socialists are amenable by their own constitutional dictation to the mandates of their locals, and that for disobedience to these mandates they may be recalled from service in the Legislature by action of a committee which may be made up of aliens.

In proof that the Socialists swear to be guided in their legislative actions entirely by the dictates of their "locals," the prosecution will make use of the following section in the Socialist Party constitution:

"Article VIII, Section 4: Elected Socialist officials shall submit the names of the contemplated or contemplated appointments for heads of departments, members of mayors' cabinets, commissioners, deputies and members of commissions or any other appointees to positions of administrative or executive character for the approval of the local or county organizations. If said local or county organization shall disapprove of any proposed appointment, it may submit its choice of appointment to the said elected official. In case of further disagreement the local or county organization, and the elected officials, have the right to appeal to the State Executive Committee.

Political observers who have been following closely every detail of the suspension of the Socialists claim that the future of the Socialist Party in the State rests with the outcome of the trial. They declare that, in the event of the charges against the Socialists being upheld by the Judiciary Committee, and later by the Assembly as a whole, legislation will be sought to prohibit the placing on the ballot of the name of any candidate representing a party not subscribing to the Constitution of the United States and the State of New York. Another outcome may be the enactment of legislation designed to amend the State Constitution to disbar from the polls any person who believes in doctrines contrary to those outlined by the National and State Constitutions, it is said.

Baltimore Shipyard Gives Supervisors 30 Days to Comply.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 16.—President Holden A. Evans, of the Baltimore Dry Docks and Shipbuilding Company, has issued an order to employes requiring that members of the supervisory force withdraw from their unions within thirty days. This action grew out of the strike of about 100 electrical workers a few days ago to enforce the reinstatement of a foreman who had been discharged for refusing to employ an electrician's helper because he did not hold a union card.

The strike was ordered by the business agent of the Electricians' Union upon the company's refusal to reinstate the foreman.

STATE BAR ASKED TO BACK ASSEMBLY

Resolution Introduced at Annual Meeting Approving Suspension of Socialists Is Deferred.

VOTE ON IT EXPECTED TODAY

Postponement Ordered at Request of Charles E. Hughes—Socialists Reply to Sweet.

A resolution "heartily approving" the course of the Assembly in ordering an inquiry to determine the fitness of its five Socialist members to serve as lawmakers was introduced at the opening session yesterday of the annual meeting held by the New York State Bar Association in the building of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York in West Forty-fourth Street.

On Tuesday night the City Bar Association adopted a resolution, introduced by Charles E. Hughes, condemning the Assembly for its action.

The resolution before the State Bar Association was offered by John Brooks Leavitt, a lawyer of 2 Rector Street, and seconded by Harry A. Forster of 32 Liberty Street. After brief discussion it was sent to the Executive Committee and will probably be reported by that body for discussion and final action at the closing session of the annual meeting this afternoon.

The Leavitt resolution follows:

Whereas the inquiry now being made by the Assembly of this State as to the qualifications of five persons elected to it has been the subject of much misrepresentation throughout the State to the effect that it is an invasion of the right of free speech; and

Whereas the real issue in that inquiry is whether or not said persons, as members of an organization which, while calling itself a political party, is, if the charges against it are true, a body of traitorous conspirators to overthrow by violence our republican form of government and substitute in its place a Soviet tyranny, are themselves by virtue of that affiliation to be considered as traitors to our Government and therefore personally unfit to sit in our Assembly.

Resolved, That this association, consisting of members of the legal profession from all over the State, hereby heartily approves of the course of the Assembly in making such inquiry, and hopes that it will continue it, to the end that if such five persons are now guilty of unseasonable words and acts, they should be so declared and admitted to their seats, and if guilty, they should be adjudged disqualified from taking part in the making of our laws.

Action on Resolution Postponed.

When the resolution was presented by Mr. Leavitt the attendance at the meeting was very slim. Henry W. Taft, who as President of the association occupied the rostrum, after listening to representations from several members who declared that in view of this fact the time was not propitious for considering it, ordered the resolution referred to the Executive Committee. Mr. Taft said that Charles E. Hughes, who had attended earlier in the day but had been called away to Brooklyn on important law business, had requested that if the ouster suit of the Socialist Assemblymen should come before the association, final debate and action be deferred until he was able to attend.

Attorney General Charles D. Newton, who will act as counsel for the Assembly Judiciary Committee in the trial of the five Socialist members, scheduled to begin in Albany on Tuesday, put in many busy hours yesterday in a search for associate council which, Mr. Newton admitted yesterday evening, had not been crowned with success.

It was learned that the negotiations had virtually narrowed down to one eminent member of the legal profession who had promised to take up the work in the event that he succeeded in getting a postponement in an important case he had on hand.

The demand of the Socialists for formal charges and a bill of particulars, voiced in statements issued at Socialist headquarters in the People's House, to a belief yesterday that the hearing of the five Socialist Assemblymen would not go on next week. Speaker Sweet and Attorney General Newton, however, both declared that it was their intention to see that the hearing before the Judiciary Committee was pushed with all possible speed.

Evidence Against Socialists.

Speaker Sweet of the Assembly spent part of the forenoon yesterday attending a meeting of the Lusk Committee, investigating seditious activities, at the City Hall. Later he was in conference with Senator Clayton R. Lusk, Attorney General Newton, and Deputy Attorney General Samuel A. Berger, going over some of the evidence which is to be presented against the Socialist members. Mr. Berger examined several witnesses behind closed doors in the Attorney General's downtown office, whose testimony is to be used at the hearings in Albany. He declined last night to say who the witnesses were.

Speaker Sweet and Attorney General Newton last night declined to discuss a report that Charles Edward Russell, John Spargo and other members of the "loyalist" group of Socialists have left their party, owing to its attitude toward the war when this country became a belligerent, would appear as witnesses at the hearings in Albany next week.

The suspended Socialist Assemblymen last night made public a statement in which they denied that they had been subjected to any demand for their resignations in advance to be used in the event that they should violate their oath of absolute submission to party pledges.

Socialists Answer Sweet.

"None of us ever signed any resignations in advance of our election," said the statement. "The provision in the constitution, while its original purpose was wholesome, has long ceased to be more than an empty formality. The provision is just another indication of the consistent desire of the Socialist Party always to protect itself and the people against political adventurers. However, no legal power resides in the party to enforce the constitutional provision in question. In the last analysis, it is entirely up to the elected official to decide whether he will quit his office or not."

In a second statement, issued last night, the Socialist Assemblymen attacked Speaker Sweet for utterances which have been reported in the newspapers and accused him of attempting to deceive the public by false assertions.

HOLLAND FLOODS HIGHER.

Many Emergency Dikes Are Under Water—Factories Forced to Close.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 14.—Unless the Rhine, the Maas and other rivers speedily subside, Holland will be threatened by one of the greatest fresh water floods in its history. The recent high water, which for a brief time receded, weakened the emergency dikes and the present high water greatly endangers them.

Two preliminary dikes, which ordinarily protect the emergency dikes, already in many sections are under water. In some places the water has reached the emergency dikes which protect the country. Arnhen and Nymegen resemble Venice, the waters having mounted to the first story of the houses. The rivers were still rising today.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 15.—Floods of the Meuse river and affluents continue and serious damage is being done. Many steel works, collieries and glass furnaces have been obliged to shut down and railway traffic in the Meuse and Sambre valleys has been dislocated.

THOMAS SEES PERIL TO LIFE OF REPUBLIC

Prohibition Amendment Is Regarded by Colorado Senator as Violation of Rights of States.

HENRY W. TAFT FOR REFORM

President of Bar Association Suggests Changes in Procedure—Senate Urged to Agree on Peace.

A revolution in our constitutional scheme of government quite as important and destined to have as far-reaching consequences as the civil war, was the characterization of the Federal Prohibition amendment expressed here last night by United States Senator Charles S. Thomas of Colorado.

Senator Thomas, who delivered in the Hotel Astor the annual address before the State Bar Association with "Federal Encroachment" as his topic, voiced foreboding that the Eighteenth Amendment would be used by "the all-pervading spirit of unrest, of discontent, and of agitation" as an object lesson in the transformation that may be effectuated in American government.

Fears for State Rights.

"The people have recently made a radical departure from legislative to constitutional encroachment," he said, and he found the fact that the "revolution" he described "is peaceful and not bloody makes it none the less formidable; for as the former conflict involved the integrity of the Union, so the issue here challenges the integrity of the States."

"It involves," the Senator continued, "the overthrow of a fundamental constitutional principle whose overthrow the States may not survive. Any other incident may as well have precipitated it. And if by observing the formulas provided for amending the Constitution, the object embraced in the Eighteenth Amendment may be permanently embodied in it, so may any other object be, without regard to the original division of powers (between the States and the Federal Government)."

The speaker discussed the fifth article of the Constitution, which says "no State without its consent shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate." He mentioned the contention that enumerated limitations upon a given power are exclusive and that none others may be imposed upon the equilibrium of the units composing the Union, or other conflict with the positive declarations of the Tenth Amendment.

"If the contention be sound," he went on, "its logical results must be accepted. They lead to the conclusion that two-thirds of the Congress and three-fourths of the States may, by amending, fundamentally alter our system of government, abolish the States, rewrite the Constitution and substitute a national democracy for a representative republic. But if this can be done by the crafty processes of successive amendments, it can be done by the agency of a single amendment. One-fourth of the States, possibly containing half our population and vigorously protesting, may be deprived of their sovereign autonomy by the remaining three-fourths, possibly containing the other half. The latter may, by exercising such authority, thus destroy the source of it."

The Prohibition Amendment.

Only a constitutional convention representing all the people of all the States, he said, should make such a sweeping change as the abolition of the Federal guarantee to each State of a republican form of government. He described the powers of taxation and the police power as fundamentals whose addition, by amendment, to the Federal powers at the expense of the State "would result in their collapse."

Referring to unrest and radical tendencies growing out of the war and to such limitations upon its power and aspirations as are provided by our system of government, the Senator said:

"We may be sure that many new amendments, some of them already introduced and published, will be proposed for the removal or modification of such objectionable constitutional restrictions and particularly of the tedious mechanism of article 5. These will find support in proportion to the strength of the electorate behind them. And the campaign against the dual system of the Constitution, the march against the principle of representative government, will be fairly on."

Warning of the possibility of not being able to overthrow the prohibition amendment, he concluded by urging that all good Americans combine to "make it the high-water mark of the tide of modern nationalism." This he thought might be accomplished by "obedience of State and national authorities to the Constitution, by forecasting the consequences of overthrowing the barriers against transient outbursts of passion or ill-considered changes in government, by reviving in American hearts reverence for our institutions and love of justice and by recalling the solemn warning of the Hebrew prophet to "keep in the old paths; walk in the safe way; observe them well and be ye not given unto change."

Henry W. Taft Suggests Reforms.

Delivering the President's address at the afternoon session, Henry W. Taft, concerning himself with "Some Responsibilities of the American Lawyer," begged for simplification of legal procedure, saying that "the lay public cares little about the theoretical perfection of the principles of our jurisprudence; and if the machinery for their application to concrete cases is so imperfect that they cannot readily be invoked, condemnation will extend to our entire judicial system."

He thought the law of evidence particularly needed reform, instancing the perplexities of witnesses and telling how often they left the stand feeling that they had been prevented from telling the truth. He blamed the law of evidence for the great number of objections and appeals, and mentioned testimony of expert witnesses as a special field for better methods.

Turning to a consideration of "justice and the poor," Mr. Taft said there "has been substantial progress in eliminating both delay and excessive cost" of legal proceedings in which persons of small means most often are concerned, but that "certain generalizations and a few striking though hardly typical instances of delay and expense" coming out of an investigation made by a member of the Boston bar for the Carnegie Foundation "have unfortunately furnished material which is being used by radicals to aid them in their attacks upon our institutions".

The speaker took up the lack of punishment in this country for homicide, saying that in 1918 there had been only 71 executions for 8,850 homicides and making unfavorable comparison with the statistics of other countries.

The members adopted at the afternoon session, by a vote of 31 to 25, a resolution urging the President and the Senate "to consider the great importance of a speedy agreement upon the terms of peace" and "such a covenant as may in the future make wars less probable" and asking them to get together by "the same method of conciliation and concession" between the Executive and the Senate as prevailed between the nations at the Peace Conference, remembering that the Senate has no power to make a treaty, and, on the other hand, that its two-thirds vote is vital to ratification.

Almost without dissent the association called upon the Legislature for an act to provide a convention of delegates from each judicial district made up of Judges and members of the bar to prepare "general rules of practice to govern the practice in civil proceedings in the courts of this State, except the Court of Appeals," the convention to meet forty-five days after the passage of the proposed act. A voluminous report of the Committee of Law Reform was tabled pending opportunity for consideration, and a committee report calling upon State and local bar associations to bring to the attention of the trust company section of the American Bankers' Association any "evil practices of trust companies," by which was meant their intrusion into the realms of law practice, was adopted.

Wilbur F. Earp of 120 Broadway introduced a resolution condemning the prohibition amendment for taking away the police powers of the States.

There will be two sessions today and the annual dinner tonight at the Hotel Astor.

REDS ON 'ARK' MUST PASS SOVIET TESTS

Bolshevist Delegate Says Russia Will Not Be a Dumping Ground for Agitators from Here.

HELSINGFORS, Jan. 15.—Radical agitators deported from America will be carefully examined before they are permitted to enter Russia, according to a statement made to the correspondent of The Associated Press by M. Klishke, Secretary of the Soviet Delegation at Dorpat, when interviewed on the subject a short time ago. M. Klishke and his colleague, M. Benkendorff, were asked what Russia would do with the radicals being sent to Europe on board the "Soviet Ark" Buford. They professed to be uninformed on the subject, but said:

"Soviet Russia will not allow itself to be used as a dumping ground for agitators from America."

Officials are still waiting at Hangö for some word relative to the arrival of the Buford, but are without information as yet. Pending the result of negotiations the Finnish Government is believed to be conducting with the Soviet Government of Russia regarding the disposition of Emma Goldman and her party, they will be kept on board. Arrangements have been made, however, to entrain the party for the Finnish border, and it is stated United States immigration officials, who are aboard the Buford, will accompany them to the frontier.

Finland in accepting custody of the party, is said to be planning to use the prominent members for the purpose of securing the exchange of Finnish political prisoners held in Soviet Russia.

As it is regarded uncertain whether the Bolsheviki will consent to receive all members of the party, considerable speculation has been caused by the question whether those denied admission will be turned loose between the Finnish and Soviet lines to shift the best they can. It is understood the Buford will not leave Hangö until the party has crossed the Finnish border.

MINIMIZE LOSSES BY SHIPYARD FRAUDS

Payne Says That Only a Small Fraction of $737,000,000 in Coast Contracts Is Involved.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Belief that no large sum of money is involved in suspected frauds in several Pacific Coast shipyards was expressed tonight by Chairman Payne of the Shipping Board, in giving out correspondence relating to the cases.

The Department of Justice, Chairman Payne explained, asked the Shipping Board in November to suspend payments to builders on all ship contracts canceled. This was done by the Board Dec. 2. The ground for the request, as stated in the correspondence, was that the Secret Service agents considered there was a possibility that claims against the Government based on the cancellations were "padded."

Only yards in the North Pacific district, including Portland, Seattle and Tacoma, having canceled contracts, were included in the Board's order, and Chairman Payne explained that no evidence of fraud against any of the concerns had been brought to the attention of the Board. The total amount of cancellation claims filed was very small, he said, compared to the $737,000,000 in ship contracts placed on the Pacific Coast by the Board.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 16.—The next step in the investigation of alleged frauds in Pacific Coast shipyards was expected today to be announced from Seattle, Wash. Bert Schlesinger, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, said there was "no special significance" in his proposed trip to Seattle, but a Federal Grand Jury has been called to meet there next week.

he had attached a letter from District Attorney Swann, and he also submitted a supporting affidavit from Assistant District Attorney William A. McQuaid. Talley's affidavit, with the exception of previous matters and communications from the jury already made public, read:

I am chief Assistant District Attorney of the County of New York. I state it to be a fact, and a fact within the knowledge of Judge Weeks, that Judge Weeks was frequently in private conversation with Mr. Almirall, the foreman of the Extraordinary Grand Jury, at which neither the District Attorney nor any member of his staff was present.

I state it to be a fact that on more than one occasion Mr. Almirall stated to me and to the District Attorney that certain actions of the Grand Jury were based upon advice received from Judge Weeks.

I state it to be a fact and a fact within the knowledge of Judge Weeks that the Grand Jury as a body very rarely, if ever, apply to the court for legal advice.

Upon information and belief I state it to be a fact and one within the knowledge of Judge Weeks, that Judge Weeks, during the period running from Nov. 6 to Nov. 24, 1919, was engaged in conducting an investigation into Wall Street brokerage offices, with a view to ascertaining whether any public officers had been selling Interborough stock or securities short, and that as a result of this investigation no such stocks or securities were found to have been engaged in by any public official.

I state it to be a fact that the minutes of the entire Grand Jury proceedings were placed in the possession of and examined by Judge Weeks, and that I was so informed by him.

Demands Full Minutes.

After reading the affidavit Justice Weeks said it had no bearing on the question of publicity of the jury minutes. Mr. Talley insisted that all of the minutes should be revealed so that the public would know that nowhere in them was there any foundation for the charge of corruption on the part of anybody connected with the District Attorney's office. The court permitted the affidavit to be filed, remarking that the consultation referred to between the court and the foreman had to do only with the jury's business.

The supporting affidavit of Assistant District Attorney McQuaid read in part:

On the 5th day of November, 1919, I was directed by Acting District Attorney Alfred J. Talley to report to Judge Weeks in his chambers in the Criminal Courts Building. I reported to Judge Weeks and was in conference with him from about 11 o'clock until 1:30 or 2. Judge Weeks told me, in substance, that he had information that there had been short selling in the traction securities and wished me to investigate the same, and made an appointment with me to go down to his office the next day, to go over the matter. I went down to his chambers in 51 Chambers Street, and he sent for The Financial Chronicle and copies of a daily newspaper for the months of July and August, 1919, and he made up a schedule showing the high mark of the different traction securities for the years 1918 and 1919, also showing the amount of bonds and stocks, and their movements, which he tabulated and retained, showing me the result of his tabulation, same of which was done in my presence and some of which was done when I was not there.

In the meantime he communicated with the Stock Exchange, and gave me entry to the office of the Secretary of the Stock Exchange, and informed me that he had personally communicated with officers and committees of the Stock Exchange, and had some of them call upon him personally in the result of that a subpoena duces tecum was drawn up by me on a form that had been prepared by Judge Weeks, telling me what to get from the brokers whose names were turned up on the Clearing House sheets of the New York Stock Exchange. In preparation for that he had arranged to have Mr. Strait, Chairman of the Clearing House Committee of the New York Stock Exchange, appear before the Grand Jury with Clearing House sheets of a particular date, and subsequently I obtained other Clearing House sheets through this introduction to Mr. Strait, which were used as information in turning up the brokers who had dealt in the Interborough stock, which was the only security which was investigated finally. I then visited brokers indicated on these sheets after going over the Clearing House sheets with Judge Weeks. Names were selected on the first list by him and on subsequent lists by me without consulting him.

I went down to the offices of brokers turned up on these sheets as having large transactions in sales of the Interborough preferred stocks and carried with me a form of subpoena handed to me by Judge Weeks with instructions to subpoena these men before the Grand Jury if they did not permit me to see their books without subpoena. Then, when I made a note of the result of my examination of the books of the brokers' offices, I came back and submitted it to Judge Weeks.

Gave Report to Justice Weeks.

In the remaining part of the affidavit, McQuaid set forth that he visited thirty brokerage offices, indicated to him by Justice Weeks, searching for the names of public officials, or other persons, who who might have sold Interborough preferred short. Justice Weeks, he asserted, had referred to an anonymous letter received, but had not made known its contents.

The affidavit concludes with the statement that the Assistant District Attorney was told by the court on Nov. 24 that he had gone far enough in the investigation along the lines pursued and, as nothing of importance had turned up, the court had under consideration the sending of a circular letter to all the brokers in Wall Street, which McQuaid was asked to draft. He did so, and sent it to Justice Weeks, who made up alterations and returned it, with the suggestion that McQuaid or the District Attorney sign it. McQuaid said that the District Attorney refused to sign or to permit any member of his staff to sign the circular, on the group that it was a matter for the Grand Jury.

Justice Weeks said the statements in the affidavits had no bearing except to infer that such consultations were improper. The Wall Street inquiry, the court announced, was for the purpose of assisting the District Attorney.

Talley said he meant no criticism of the court, either stated or implied, and that he had filed the affidavits as directed by the court. He asked the court to make public the fact that nothing had been found to connect any public official with any questionable stock transaction. Justice Weeks replied that he had no control over a matter not before him; that the transactions of only two or three days had been examined, and that the District Attorney had the same right to publish the result that he had in any other criminal investigation.

Talley insisted that the transit investigation and the calling or witnesses as a result of finding Mayor Hylan's letter in the city files mentioning an alleged bribe of $52,000, were inseparable.

"Didn't you order or send Mr. McQuaid to find out whether Mayor Hylan or District Attorney Swann had been dealing in Interborough securities?"

Or any other public official," replied the court.

Swann Reviews Justice Weeks's Acts.

A letter which Mr. Swann addressed to Justice Weeks on Jan. 10 was submitted to the court with the affidavits. This reviewed McQuaid's work in trying to find evidence of stock transactions by District Attorney or the Mayor, "whose charges against the Interborough officials of having fomented the strike of their employes as a part of their propaganda to force the eight-cent fare were pending before the Grand Jury."

Mr. Swann concluded his communication to the court with these statements:

I also called your attention to the fact that the counsel for the Interborough had appeared for the accused officials in answer to these charges and that your son, who is in the office of this attorney, had at his request procured a transcript of the court minutes of the District Attorney's application to the court for permission to present evidence against the Interborough officials.

You are now seeking to investigate the cases in the Court of General Sessions where the District Attorney made written recommendations, approved by the Judges of that court of bail discharges or dismissal of indictments for reasons which seemed good and sufficient in the view of the District Attorney and the Judges. All of the records of the office are open to you and you will be given every opportunity to make your personal investigation.

I assume that in all this you are acting as an individual citizen and not in your judicial capacity, as of course, the scheme of American justice does not provide for judge-investigator-prosecutor.

Justice Weeks reserved decision on making the minutes public.

Amendment to the Constitution of the United States."

The pulpits of most of the city's leading churches of denominations opposed to the liquor traffic have not been opened at all to the Anti-Saloon League, it is maintained, or so seldom as not to count.

"We are compelled to believe," says the address, "that the main reason why so many high-grade members of New York churches of prohibition denominations have not been in sympathy with the prohibition movement is because they have not, through their churches, been brought face to face with the facts and their responsibility."

Brooklyn members of the Allied Citizens of America sent out an appeal yesterday to all ministers in Brooklyn urging them to observe Law and Order Sunday. "The Haskell campaign," the appeal states, "last Fall showed us what we must expect to face, and we know you will do your utmost to swell the number of registered law-abiding citizens of Brooklyn who will help hold the ground won for us by the American people."

New Jersey League Hopeful.

Albert Illinger, President of the Liquor Dealers' Protective League of New Jersey, addressed a long, hopeful communication to the local associations of the league yesterday, in which he states that there is good reason to believe that the authority of the States may be used to annul the present drastic provisions of the law. He states that "just as soon as Governor-elect Edward I. Edwards is inaugurated next Tuesday a bill will be introduced to legalize the manufacture of beers, wines and liquors in the State.

The Anti-Saloon League celebrated the incoming of constitutional prohibition with a "victory banquet" in the Robert Treat Hotel at Newark last night, the exercises taking the form of a watch night service until 12:01 this morning when prohibition became operative. A souvenir program was provided, the frontispiece being the reproduction of an original pen drawing by William Cairns showing the old First Congregational Church in Oberlin, Ohio, in which the Anti-Saloon League had its birth in 1893, with a medallion inset portrait of Dr. Howard H. Russell, the founder of the league, as he appeared in those days.

The Newark Retail Liquor Dealers' Association and the Improved Liquor Dealers' Association decided yesterday to keep their places open and to sell "near beer" for the present. It was believed that the present Legislature would legalize the sale of beer and light wines, while many of the dealers have hope that the Eighteenth Amendment will yet be declared inoperative.

John S. Bennett, counsel for the Brooklyn Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, estimated last night that 75 per cent. of the liquor men in Brooklyn would immediately go out of business. One year ago, he said, there were 2,000 liquor licenses in Brooklyn. Since that time about 500 have been surrendered. Beginning today, Mr. Bennett said, the remaining licenses would be turned in rapidly.

"As sensible men," said Mr. Bennett, "most of our members know that the public will not buy the one-half of 1 per cent. stuff. As law-abiding citizens they cannot sell anything else. So there is nothing to do but close up."

Joseph Krumholz, a bartender who was arrested at 1098 Castleton Avenue, New Brighton, Staten Island, on a charge of selling brandy was held in $500 bail for examination by Commissioner McGoldrick.

Several Liquor Men Sentenced.

In order to dispose of many pending cases of persons charged with violating the Volstead act, Federal Judge Chatfield accepted pleas of guilty in the case of one owner and twelve bartenders. Edward Johnson of 157 Harrison Avenue, a proprietor, was sentenced to one day in jail and fined $100. The twelve bartenders were sentenced to one day in jail and fined sums ranging from $25 to $100.

A crew of a wrecking company are at work trying to save about $150,000 worth of whisky on board the barge Frank. The barge sprang a leak some time Thursday night and yesterday morning was partly submerged and resting on a rock near the pier at Ninety-fourth Street and the North River. Divers of the wrecking company were hopeful that the tide would go down and they would be able to get the whisky ashore by means of derricks.

The whisky is the property of the Green River Distilling Company, 280 Madison Avenue, and is consigned to a representative of the company at Nassau in the British West Indies. The barge came from Newark through many ice floes, and this is probably what caused the leaking.

BRYAN AT CAPITAL "WAKE."

Suggests He Is Used to Attending "Political Funerals."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Reformers from every part of the United States gathered here tonight in a watch night service to welcome the first national prohibition year, listened to reminiscences of William J. Bryan, Secretary Daniels and others.

Referring to his personal participation in so many "political funerals," Mr. Bryan declared it was altogether appropriate that he should be the witness at the obsequies of another national issue.

Secretary Daniels, recalling the storm raised by his edict that the navy must be "run on water," said he was told the navy would be ruined by such an innovation.

"I have ruined it every year since I have been Secretary of the Navy," he added, "except during the period in which it was needed to win the war."

CHICAGO, Jan. 16. — Chicagoans cheered the final moment of a moist United States in a more or less tame celebration in the cafés and restaurants until after midnight without restraint from prohibition officers.

Truck automobiles, and vans had scurried over the city all day transporting liquor from offices and lockers to homes. Late in the afternoon Major Dalrymple, head of the prohibition enforcers, announced that his men would not make arrests or confiscate liquor, except in case of sales, until there had expired the ten days of grace allowed every owner of liquor for filing a statement showing his alcoholic possessions. Many saloons closed their doors today. Restaurants, doughnut parlors, coffee shops, lunch counters, drug stores and candy shops stepped in.

NAVY MORALE LOST, SIMS TESTIFIES

GIVES HIS SIDE OF DISPUTE

Says That He Criticises Secretary Daniels's Awards Only as a Matter of Duty.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The morale of the Navy has been "shot to pieces" because of "flagrant injustices" in conferring decorations on naval officers, Admiral William S. Sims, head of the Navy War College and formerly in command of American Naval Forces in Europe, asserted today before the Senate Naval Affairs Sub-Committee at the beginning of its investigation into war awards to naval officers.

While Admiral Sims severely criticised the attitude of Secretary Daniels and the Knight Board in the conferring of decorations he disclaimed any intention of attacking the Secretary personally or of showing insubordination. He was only performing a part of what he considered his duty in offering constructive criticism. He was acting solely for the welfare of the navy, he said.

The Admiral especially resented the action of Secretary Daniels and the Knight Board in revising recommendations as to decorations submitted by himself. Recommendations inserted by Secretary Daniels, including one for his brother-in-law, Commander David Worth Bagley, who lost the destroyer he commanded in a fight with a submarine, had been greeted with a ridicule throughout the navy, Admiral Sims asserted.

"When such recommendations were made regardless of my explanations that they would injure the morale of the service, and when a man of my forty-five years' experience and association with naval officers states that will be the effect, you can imagine why the morale of the navy has been shot to pieces, and why there is no navy left," Admiral Sims said heatedly.

The hearing was marked by sharp verbal clashes throughout. Senator Pittman, Nevada, and Senator Trammell, Florida, Democrats, asked most of the questions, Chairman Hale, Maine, Senator McCormick, Illinois, and Senator Newberry, Mich, Republican members, being chiefly listeners.

Senator Trammell provoked the Admiral's anger when he said it appeared as if Admiral Sims, in his recommendations, had honored officers who stayed on land than those who served at sea.

"That's the most complete balling of the matter I have seen yet," the Admiral retorted. "You have spoken sneeringly of the scores of men on my staff."

"I haven't," replied Trammell, "but I don't propose to accept your view."

"You don't have to," Admiral Sims retorted, "but you mustn't get the facts wrong. You speak of routine duties after I have told you how the men on my staff labored. I was doing routine duty then, because I was on shore. But my services were important and those performed by my staff were more important still."

He contended that the officers immediately in command should make recommendations for awards. They alone were in a position to appreciate fully the relative merits of heroic actions, he insisted.

The awarding of medals should be abolished, he said at one point. "If the Government could see its way clear to wipe out the whole business and start clean I think a majority of the service would be pleased," he said. "The whole business always leads to trouble. I saw this coming and tried by every means to head it off before it became public. If I could have had my way the matter would have been settled without a peep in the newspapers and we would not have to be washing our dirty linen in this way."

At the opening of the hearing the Republican and Democratic committeemen clashed when Senator Pittman moved to have Secretary Daniels testify first, but the committee voted 3 to 2 for proceeding with the Admiral.

Deplores Lack of Criticism.

In a formal statement the Admiral set forth that departmental censorship prevented constructive criticism, and that as a result the United States Navy was trailing those of other nations.

"The censorship," he said, "is, to say the least, a singular regulation to be enforced in a democratic form of government; and the inevitable result is that the American public knows less about navy matters than the public of any other considerable maritime nation, because the officers of the latter are permitted, under certain regulations, when not on duty, to publish any article in criticism or suggestion which in their judgment will be of benefit to their service or their country. A similar permission granted to American naval officers would not only be of great benefit to the public and the navy, but the navy cannot attain its maximum efficiency without it."

He read to the committee a letter from Secretary Daniels asking him what recommendations were going to be made for Commander Bagley, the Secretary's brother-in-law. The Admiral replied that it was against the traditions of the navy to reward an officer who lost his ship in an encounter with the enemy.

Scores of the wives and women relatives of naval officers attended the hearing, interrupting frequently with laughter when the Admiral made a peppery or sarcastic answer.

Out of the 202 officers on his London staff, 19 were recommended for decoration, he said, while out of the 5,000 under his command he recommended decorations for 440, 218 being approved.

He mentioned the work of Commander J. V. Babcock, who drew up the plans for convoying troops across the Atlantic.

"I knew that if we had any considerable disaster to a troop transport it would involve my neck," he said, "but, nevertheless, I delegated this matter to a member of my staff, and so confident was I of his ability that I never gave the matter a moment's thought except when something was brought to me."

Commander Babcock was recommended for a Distinguished Service Medal, and got a Navy Cross, the lower medal.

"If the Secretary had made no other change, that in itself was destructive to morale," he added.

"Take the case of the Secretary's own brother-in-law," he continued. "He was recommended for a Navy Cross and got the Distinguished Service Medal, regardless of my explanations that it would injure morale. When such recommendations as that were made regardless of my explanations that they would injure the morale of the service you can imagine why the morale of the navy has been shot to pieces and why there is no navy left—that was the last straw."

"Well, we heard that there was no navy left before the war," Senator Pittmann interrupted.

Senator Pittmann drew another sharp rejoinder when he asked if "some one besides the commanding officer shouldn't decide whether his staff is the greatest staff in the world."

"I never said my staff was the greatest staff in the world," was the answer. "That's not the way to get along with this investigation, either. We who were over there with the men saw them work and sweat blood. No board sitting 3,000 miles away can judge of the services they rendered."

"The trouble is that they did not do what you wanted them to do, isn't it?" asked Senator Trammel. "Wasn't the Secretary absolutely within his rights in revising the list?"

"He was absolutely within his rights," the Admiral agreed.

He had not recommended enlisted men for decorations because the bulk of the navy did no fighting.

"I didn't have a war to fight," he explained. "We might be compared to motor lorries who were trying to get men and supplies across safely. We didn't have any naval warfare because the enemy wouldn't come out and fight."

Admiral Sims paid especial tribute to Lieutenant A. L. Gates, Ensign H. C. Hammann, Lieutenant C. H. Ludlow, Captain H. L. Cone, and Lieutenant Frank Bruce, all of whom received decorations inferior to those he recommended.

Admiral Sims will be examined again tomorrow.

Says Morale Has Not Suffered.

While Admiral Sims was testifying before the Senate committee, Rear Admiral Washington, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, was assuring the House Naval Committee that the navy would have been better off without the awarding of decorations. He urged higher pay for officers and men.

Representative Britten, Republican, Illinois, asked if the controversy over awards had affected the morale of the navy.

"No, I do not think so," answered Admiral Washington. "Naturally, the service deprecates the unfortunate controversy between the officials."

"Well, do the naval officers feel that the Knight Board is any better qualified to make the awards than Secretary Daniels?" inquired Mr. Britten.

"I am not in a position to answer that, but I do feel that the awards are not satisfactory either to the board or to the Secretary. In the board the awards were by no means unanimous. The situation is not worse than it was after the Spanish War. Personally, I think the navy would be better off with no awards."

He denied that the medal awards had caused resignations or the prevalent dissatisfaction. He ascribed both to low pay and consequent inability of officers to live in circumstances becoming their rank.

"No human agency could be devised to make a perfectly satisfactory list of awards," he said.

Representative Lufkin, Republican, Massachusetts, suggested that no enlisted men had received medals. Admiral Washington replied that many such had been decorated with medals and that more would have received them if records of their gallantry had been available. This was chiefly due to the fact that no sea battles were fought.

UNIVERSAL TRAINING FAVORED BY LEGION

Former Representative Miller Gives Body's Views on Army—Condemns Unpreparedness.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The ideas of the American Legion upon the future military policy of the nation were submitted to the House Committee on Military Affairs today by former Representative Thomas W. Miller of Delaware, who was a Lieutenant Colonel in the army during the world war.

Mr. Miller's statement to the House committee may be summarized as follows:

"The members of the American Legion are deeply impressed with the folly of national unpreparedness for the late war, from the results of which they suffered while in France. They believe that this country should adopt a policy of universal military training for its young men as the only fair, democratic, and adequate system of defense.

"They are strongly opposed to militarism or the fostering of any military caste. They believe that the regular army should be reduced to the lowest numbers necessary for our foreign garrisons and other necessary professional duty; that our General Staff should be liberalized by an admixture of competent citizen officers, and that all officers should be subjected to severe tests of fitness which would eliminate all dead wood.

"They believe that this citizen army should be trained so far as possible by citizen officers and its units localized in the territory from which they come, but that it must be trained solely as a national army under the authority of the national Government for use only in time of war.

"That this training shall be taken by the youth of the nation in their eighteenth, nineteenth, or twentieth year, and shall be for a period of not less than four and not more than six months during the first year, to be followed by a two weeks' training period each year for two years.

"They favor the continuance of training camps for the training and education of officers to serve with the citizen army. They recommend that the Air Service be made a separate department and be considered a combat branch of the army."

American Marines and Native Gendarmerie Disable Half the Force —Two of Our Men Wounded.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 16.—United States marines and Haitian gendarmerie yesterday repelled an attack on Port-au-Prince, the Haitian capital, by a force of 300 bandits, more than half of whom were killed, wounded or captured, after being pursued outside the city.

The total casualties of the marines were two privates wounded, according to the report of the engagement received at the Navy Department today from Colonel J. H. Russell, commanding the marine forces and gendarmerie in Haiti.

The bandit force, Colonel Russell said, approached Port-au-Prince in three columns, which immediately were met and driven back. Certain revolutionary elements of the city attempted to join the bandits in the assault, he said, adding that he believed the fate of the attacking forces should be "sufficient to prevent an early repetition of the assault."

Private Lemil Combs, R. F. D. No. 2, Wheelersburg, Pa., was reported seriously wounded, and Private P. M. McLaughlin, 860 Edmond Street, St. Paul, Minn., received slight wounds.

The young woman, who had been arraigned on a summons and pleaded guilty to a charge of making an improper turn while driving the automobile at 120th Street and Lexington Avenue, told the Magistrate she worked in a restaurant in Lenox Avenue.

"Well, inasmuch as you have pleaded guilty, I will fine you $2," remarked the Magistrate.

BAKER IS NOMINATED BOSTON POSTMASTER

Wilson Selects Competitive Candidate Who Was First on Civil Service List.

WALSH NOT TO OPPOSE HIM

But Senator Will Attack the New Method of Filling First-Class Offices.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—President Wilson sent to the Senate today the nomination of Roland M. Baker to be Postmaster at Boston. This is the first appointment of a candidate selected in accordance with President Wilson's executive order for appointing first-class Postmasters under the competitive examination system.

The United States Civil Service Commission sent a special board to Boston to conduct the examination to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Postmaster William Murray last year. There were a large number of candidates including Assistant Postmaster John Hurley, who had been acting Postmaster since the death of Postmaster Murray, and ex-Mayor Curley of Boston, who had served as a member of Congress.

The Civil Service Commission laid down the rule that a candidate must have had seven years' business experience in an executive capacity, and it is asserted that this debarred Assistant Postmaster Hurley in spite of the fact that he had served in the Boston Post Office twenty-seven years.

The special board of examiners certified three names to the United States Civil Service Commission, those of Mr. Baker, who was No. 1 on the list; George U. Crocker, former City Treasurer of Boston, who was No. 2, and Charles L. Burrill, former State Treasurer of Massachusetts, who was No. 3, out of a list of more than sixty candidates.

From the names of the three certified the Civil Service Commission selected that of Mr. Baker, and notified Postmaster General Burleson of its choice. The Postmaster General, although favoring Hurley, notified the President of the commission's action, and the President sent Mr. Baker's nomination to the Senate.

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, who lives in Boston and under the former system would have had the selection of the Postmaster, will not oppose the nomination of Mr. Baker when it comes before the Senate for confirmation, but will criticise the new method of selection. He takes the ground that the party in power must assume responsibility for the administration of Post Offices in large cities, which, according to his view, are policy-making offices.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 16.—Roland M. Baker, the appointee for Postmaster, is 55 years old, and an Independent Republican. He entered the tanning and shoe manufacturing business in 1883. In 1906 he became President of the Winslow Bros. and Smith Company and later organized as Roland M. Baker & Co., Tanners. He retired from active business in 1917.

While it is not known that Colonel House is back of the Hoover sentiment, it is regarded as significant that many of the leading Democrats whom he has met in a social way since his return to Texas are now expressing themselves as being in favor of Hoover for President.

WOOD GAINS IN MARYLAND.

Both Factions of Party Seem Favorable to His Candidacy.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 16.—General Leonard Wood has an excellent chance of getting Maryland's vote in the Republican convention.

Since he came here Monday to dine with Norman James at Catonsville, developments favorable to him have multiplied. One of the most significant was a visit he made to Montgomery County, with Galen L. Tait, chairman of the State Central Committee, as his escort.

On his previous visit the men surrounding General Wood rather suggested the Goldsborough wing, but since Mr. Tait personifies the Weller-Jackson organization, it may be assumed that General Wood's candidacy is meeting with favor in the eyes of both factions. If this be so the State will be for General Wood.

Mrs. Bennett is planning a tour of Western States.

WOULD END DIVISION OF ENGLISH LAWYERS

Parliament to be Asked to Abolish Distinction Between Barristers and Solicitors.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Parliamentary sanction is to be asked for a proposal to abolish the old distinction between barristers and solicitors which obtains in England, and follow the American system under which all qualified members of the legal profession are lawyers.

A committee of members of the Law Society has drawn up a bill which it is hoped will be laid before Parliament next session. One of its provisions will be to establish a school of law at which all desiring to enter the legal profession will have to qualify.

At present the methods of gaining admission to the two branches of law here differ in many respects besides the examinations. The would-be solicitor serves a period in a solicitor's office, while the man reading for the bar has, among other things, to eat a certain number of meals at one of the inns of the court.

"If the bill becomes law," said one of its sponsors today, "the names of barrister and solicitor will disappear and members of the profession will be known by one name only, such as lawyer or legal practitioner. The old rule, which dates from the time of the Stuarts, that solicitors are not allowed to defend their clients in high courts would be swept away, and barristers in turn would be allowed to come into direct touch with their clients.

"The idea of establishing a central school of law is that lawyers should not only have to pass examinations, but should be given practical instruction in the work of their profession. It is suggested that the Lord Chancellor should be President of the proposed school and that the Secretaries of State for the Colonies and for Foreign Affairs, and the principals of the universities of Oxford, Cambridge, and London should be members of the committee."

About a year ago a proposed fusion of the two branches of the legal profession was debated at a meeting of the Law Society and a resolution in favor of the measure was adopted by a vote of four to one. A poll was demanded and the result was the reversal of the decision by a large majority. The sponsors of the present proposal, however, say that they have now secured influential backing.

PERSHING FLAG TO COLLEGE.

Wellesley Also Receives His Helmet and Kaiser's Pennon.

Special to The New York Times.

WELLESLEY, Mass., Jan. 16.—General Pershing's four-starred flag of red with four white stars, together with his war helmet and the personal battle pennon of the German Emperor were presented to Wellesley College today through the Acora Society and a receiving committee from each class. The General's wife was a member of Acora, and he is now an honorary member. The presentation was made by Countess de Tiedekerke, Chairman of the Belgian Purple Cross, now visiting in this country.

PAYS DE CASTELLANE DEBTS

Former Anna Gould Released from Guardianship of George J.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The Duchess de Talleyrand, formerly Miss Anna Gould of New York, was today released from the guardianship in litigation here of her brother, George J. Gould.

The Court said that the Duchess, "with the aid of her brother, had paid all debts contracted under her first marriage [with Count Boni de Castellane] and had not contracted new debts."

Husband and Wife Die of Influenza.

Vincent E. Mitchell of 1,884 Arthur Avenue, the Bronx, a commission merchant with offices in the Cotton Exchange Building, died yesterday morning at his home of influenza contracted a few days ago. His wife died a few hours later, also of influenza, and his mother and two small children are ill with the same disease. He was 40 years old and his wife was 38.

Miller Not Candidate for Governor.

SYRACUSE, Jan. 16.—In reply to an inquiry from The Post-Standard, Nathan L. Miller of this city, former Judge of the State Court of Appeals, announced tonight that he would not be a candidate for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination. "The reason which impelled my retirement from the bench," said Judge Miller, "precludes my being a candidate for any political office." Judge Miller retired from the bench several years ago, giving as a reason the inadequacy of salaries paid to the judiciary.

Indorse F. M. Hugo for Governor.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 16.—The boom for Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo as Republican candidate for Governor this Fall was given additional impetus today when the Jefferson County Republican Committee formally indorsed him. The candidacy of Senator Wadsworth for re-election was indorsed.

DEMOCRATIC CHIEFS CONFER HERE TODAY

Chairman Cummings to Talk Over Convention Plans with Committee.

WOOD HERE, KEEPS SILENT

Pershing Men Promise Surprise—Edwards Boom Expected to Start Monday Night.

Democrats of National prominence will be in the city today to confer with Homer S. Cummings, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, regarding arrangements for holding the National convention of the party at San Francisco on June 28. The Committee on Arrangements appointed by the National Chairman will talk matters over with him at the National Democratic Club, after which there will be a luncheon at the club.

The members of the Committee on Arrangements to take part in the conference are: Mrs. George Bass, Chicago; May E. Foy, Los Angeles; J. Bruce Kremer, Montana; Wilbur M. Marsh, Iowa; Edward G. Hoffman, Indiana; Clark Howell, Georgia; Norman E. Mack New York; Fred B. Lynch, Minnesota; Charles Boeschenstein, Illinois; E. H. Moore, Ohio; Arthur F. Mullen, Nebraska; Dr. John W. Coughlin, Massachusetts; Isidore B. Dockweiler, California; John T. Barnett, Colorado; Patrick H. Quinn, Rhode Island, and Robert H. Elder, Idaho.

Under the auspices of the National Democratic Club a tesumonial dinner will be given Chairman Cummings at the Hotel Commodore on Feb. 5.

Wood Here, Avoids Interviews.

General Leonard Wood, on whose behalf a campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination is already well under way in New York, arrived in the city last night for a conference with his managers. The General went direct to the Harvard Club, where he notified interviewers he had nothing to say. The candidate will be the guest today of Otto H. Kahn at a luncheon, and in the evening he will go to Providence, R. I., to make an address before the Chamber of Commerce there. He will spend Sunday in Boston with his campaign managers.

At the Biltmore Hotel, where George Wood, one of three Wood brothers of Lincoln, Neb., is nursing a boom for General Pershing for the Republican nomination, it was said that a Pershing headquarters would be established in New York City early next week.

"It will surprise a whole lot of people," said Mr. Wood, "when it becomes known just who is backing the Pershing movement. A number of very prominent Republicans are working hard to induce the General to become a candidate. The movement, as a matter of fact, is far more widespread than most people have any idea of. The General will soon be very much in the running."

Mr. Wood said the purchase of The Omaha Bee by Nelson B. Updike, a merchant of Omaha, would help along the Pershing cause, as the newspaper undoubtedly would support the General. He denied that the General had any interest in the paper.

Edwards Boom Due Monday.

New York politicians discussed yesterday the report that Governor-elect Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey is to be groomed for the Democratic Presidential nomination by a number of prominent Democratic leaders, including National Chairman Homer S. Cummings and Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson. The boom is to be launched, it was said, at a dinner to Governor-elect Edwards on the eve of his inauguration next Tuesday at the Robert Treat Hotel in Newark.

FORCE PRISONERS TO ENLIST

Poles Tell the Pope Bolsheviki Hold Death Penalty Over Returning Men.

ROME, Jan. 15.—Russian prisoners returning to Russia from prison camps are obliged to enlist in the Bolshevist army on penalty of death, according to the Polish Government, which has replied to a question sent to it by the Vatican. The Polish authorities made this reply after the Vatican had asked the Polish Government to allow Russian prisoners still in Germany to pass through Poland for repatriation.

Because the Russian prisoners, who refused to join the Soviet army are shot, the Polish Government says it would suggest that the repatriation of the prisoners be postponed until the Soviet Government reverses its policy.

WILL INVESTIGATE NEWSPRINT AFFAIRS

Trade Commission to Determine Whether Maximum Prices Decree Is Being Observed.

QUESTIONNAIRES SENT OUT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The Federal Trade Commission announced tonight that, responding to the application of the Attorney General, the commission has sent to newsprint manufacturers, jobbers and publishers questionnaires in the form of letters, responses to which will aid in determining the manner in which the terms of final decree in the so-called newsprint paper cases are being observed.

Attorney General Palmer's request to Chairman Murdock of the Trade Commission was that the commission make an investigation, pursuant to the provisions of Paragraph C of Section 6 of the Trade Commission act, to ascertain the manner in which the final decree in the case of the United States versus Meade et al., under the Federal anti-trust law, known as the newsprint paper case, has been and is being carried out.

The Commission in particular will attempt to develop whether the manufacturers who signed the agreement of November 26, 1917 between the Attorney General as trustee and certain manufacturers of newsprint, have actually produced the daily tonnage of newsprint paper which they respectively subjected to the terms of the agreement, whether the manufacturers have offered this tonnage for sale in accordance with the agreement; how much of the tonnage the manufacturers who signed the agreement have sold to jobbers or dealers and at what prices, and whether the jobbers, dealers, or other middlemen in reselling to the small publishers of the country have observed the maximum commission fixed in the agreement.

The decree under investigation is that by which the Federal Trade Commission, on Oct. 18, 1918, fixed the following maximum prices, effective May 1, 1918, and to run until July 1, 1918: Roll news, car lots, f. o. b. mill, $3.63¼ per hundredweight; roll news, less than car lots, f. o. b. mill, $3.75¾ per hundredweight; sheet news, car lots, f. o. b. mill, $4.03¼ per hundredweight; sheet news, less than car lots, f. o. b. mill, $4.15⅝ per hundredweight.

On the same date it fixed the following maximum prices effective July 1, 1918: Roll news, car lots, f. o. b. mill, $3.75¾ per hundredweight; roll news, less than car lots, f. o. b. mill, $3.87⅝ per hundredweight; sheet news, car lots, f. o. b. mill, $4.15¼ per hundredweight; sheet news, less than car lots, f. o. b. mill, $4.27⅝ per hundredweight.

HOLYOKE, Mass., Jan. 16.—An increase in the price of paper amounting to 20 per cent. was announced today by the American Writing Paper Company, effective Monday. The reason given is "the advanced and advancing costs of raw materials and labor and the operating exigencies with which the fine paper industry is faced."

CANADA STOPS SHIPMENTS.

Newsprint from Fort Francis Mills Held at Border.

OTTAWA, Jan. 16.—Shipments of paper from the Fort Francis Pulp and Paper Company to American publishers are being stopped at the border, Sir Henry Drayton, Minister of Finance, announced today. The embargo against the company was put in force by Robert A. Pringle, paper controller, as a result of its alleged failure to supply papers in Western Canada.

Newspapers in Chicago and Minneapolis are considering bringing damage suits for $1,000,000 against Canadian officials because of the embargo, according to an announcement today by A. D. George, counsel for the Fort Francis company. Mr. George said he understood two papers had notified the Minister of Customs at Ottawa that they would hold him personally responsible for damages through failure to receive paper.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 16.—Because of the shortage of newsprint, the three daily papers in this city announced today that they would suspend publication tomorrow. The three editorial staffs will unite in issuing a one-page paper containing only the most important news, which will be mailed to country post offices and placed on bulletin boards there.

SURVIVOR OF AFRIQUE DESCRIBES HER LOSS

Only Passenger Saved Says That Others Failed to Take to the Boats.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Georges Metayer, of Bordeaux, the only passenger rescued of the 474 aboard the steamer Afrique, when she was wrecked last Sunday in the Bay of Biscay, said in an interview today that many others might have been saved but that they refused to enter the boats. Terror-stricken Singalese prayed, but many passengers took matters calmly, believing the steamer Ceylan, summoned by wireless, would save them. With a hole in her side, the Afrique steamed toward land through a tempest. By night the incoming waters had put out all the fires.

"The vessel listed to an angle of 45 degrees," M. Metayer said, "and the Captain ordered the boats lowered. The passengers refused to enter them, declaring they felt safer aboard the Afrique. At no time was there any panic.

"Captain Ledu stayed on the bridge to the end. He did his full duty, as did the the twenty-three-year-old wireless operator, Mezier, who, for twenty-four hours had the receivers to his ears and sent and received messages."

PREDICTS UNDERGROUND BOULEVARDS IN LONDON

Sir Albert Stanley, Now Lord Ashfield, Says Motor Subways Are Coming.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Lord Ashfield of Southwell, the former Sir Albert Stanley's new title, foreshadowed a vast system of underground roads for London devoted exclusively to motor traffic, in a speech at the American Luncheon Club today.

These roads, he suggested, would be connected with the outer districts of the metropolis by what might be described as boulevards, the latter being exclusively used for motor traffic.

London today is the greatest riding city in the world, he said. In 1914 the average number of journeys taken in the year per head of population was 303. He estimated the number now to have been increased to 303. Some one had got to provide roads capable of dealing with 375,000 motor cars, and he predicted that a rapidly increasing number of underground railways would have to be built, as well as underground motor roads.

GASOLINE ADVANCED AGAIN.

Retailers Announce New Price of 29 and 30 Cents a Gallon.

The high cost of motoring will make a further advance today when automobile users will be called upon to pay from 29 to 30 cents a gallon for gasoline at service stations and public garages. The new wholesale price of 26½ cents announced early in the week by the Standard Oil Company goes into effect today. Only a week ago the price of 24½ cents which prevailed most of last year was advanced a cent.

Most of the garage retailers make 2½ cents a gallon, and for practically a year 27 cents has been the standard price, although in some localities it has been a cent more. Several service station managers said yesterday that the new retail rate would be 29 cents and possibly 30. At the Automobile Club of America, where care is taken to provide the best gasoline, the price has been 30 cents for some time. It will now be 31 cents.

INTERBOROUGH MEN POSTPONE DEMANDS

NO DANGER OF A STRIKE

Harmonious Meeting Between Brotherhood and Officers—Hedley Says More Income Is Needed.

At the close of a long conference yesterday afternoon between Frank Hedley, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, and a committee representing the Interborough Brotherhood, the organization embracing practically all of the employes of the company, it was announced that the brotherhood would not press its demands for an increase of wages until after it was determined whether the company would be permitted to increase the rate of fare.

At a conference on Dec. 22 the committee asked that the difference between the 50 per cent. increase demanded in August last and the 25 per cent. which was granted be accorded in line with an understanding during the settlement of the strike last August which tied up the lines for thirty-two hours. At the end of the December conference Mr. Hedley stated that the utmost good feeling prevailed between the officials of the company and the employes, and that the men understood that an increase of wages was impossible at a five-cent fare.

A similar statement was made yesterday. As usual, the talk was behind closed doors. When it was over Mr. Hedley invited the reporters into his office.

"At the meeting today," said Mr. Hedley, "a complete spirit of co-operation was developed between the company and the men. Of course the men want more pay, but they know that the financial condition of the company for the moment makes it impossible to give the increase asked for. They also know that this inability to increase their pay will continue unless the company takes in more money.

"The receipts are not sufficient to furnish a hope that the company will be able to meet payments that are coming due, notwithstanding that the company is doing an enormous business. I hope some way will be found for the company to increase its income.

"We have asked the men," he continued, "to co-operate with us and to help us over the present period. They have been so good as to agree to go back to 16,000 or 17,000 men they represent and explain the situation as I have outlined it to them. It is my belief, from what I have heard, that the co-operation on the part of the men will be of the most complete character."

Mr. Hedley looked at P. J. Connolly, President of the Brotherhood, who confirmed what Mr. Hedley had said.

The other representatives of the brotherhood acquiesced in the statement by nodding their heads.

It was intimated that no further demands would be made for more pay until after the Board of Estimate completed its inquiry into the traction situation and had acted definitely on the suggestion of Federal Judge Mayer that the company be permitted to charge an eight-cent fare for at least six months.

Professor Resigns Following Raid.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 16.—Professor Newell L. Sims of the Department of Sociology of the University of Florida, resigned from the college faculty today after a raid on his home by Department of Justice operatives, who said they found radical literature there. No charges were preferred against Professor Sims, as it was said he had violated no law.

EXPLAINS CRITICISM OF OUR CONSTITUTION

Herr Preuss Holds That a Responsible Cabinet System Has Proved to be Better.

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—Hugo Preuss, former Minister of the Interior, today said that one of the chief reasons for framing the German constitution differently from the American charter was that under the American Constitution the Cabinet Ministers occupied positions as mere assistants to the President and were not accountable to the Parliament of the country. He was discussing a statement ascribed to him that American Great Headquarters had sought to influence the shaping of the German Constitution.

Herr Preuss declared that the press had slightly misquoted him and that he had not made any "revelations."

"This is what happened," the former Minister said. "Soon after publication of my first draft, a year ago, I was informed indirectly that American headquarters was actively interested in the proposed charter, with which it already was familiar through a translation. It was hinted that in view of the numerous points of resemblance between the older American Republic and the younger German democracy surprise prevailed in American circles that my draft failed to follow the American institutions in their essential features. To this I replied that the very points named revealed to my mind the weaknesses in the American Constitution. I did not use the word 'inferior,' reported in the press, but said that the institutions proposed in their places I considered politically more advantageous.

"I submitted a written statement of my contentions, the chief of which was that I preferred the introduction of a parliament system opposed to the status of American Department Secretaries, who are merely aids to the President and are not responsible to Congress. Here, I claim, lies the root of one of the greatest drawbacks of the American constitutional organization, which in so many other respects I consider most excellent and worthy of copying."

ROCKEFELLER AID PLAN.

Conference Will Fix Canadian Medical School Gifts.

In response to many inquiries which he said had been received regarding aid to Canadian medical schools, made possible by John D. Rockefeller's recent gift of $50,000,000, part of which the donor suggested should be spent in Canada, Dr. George E. Vincent, President of the Rockefeller Foundation, in a statement yesterday said it was unlikely that any formal or official Canadian commission would be appointed to act on behalf of the Foundation's board.

Dr. Vincent explained that no definite policy would be adopted regarding the disbursement of the $5,000,000 to be applied in accordance with the donor's suggestion, but on condition that the schools raise further funds from other sources, "until after conference with a large number of Canadians representing all the significant institutional and geographical interests in the Dominion."

"The officers have solicited from a number of Canadians," the statement concluded, "suggestions as to persons with whom conferences should be held. Nothing further has been done, and above all no appointments to an official commission have been made or are likely to be made."

WILLIAMS TO MEET BAKERS.

Means of Keeping Down Price of Bread Will Be Discussed.

Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams announced yesterday that he would hold a conference with wholesale bakers Wednesday afternoon at his office, 130 East Fifteenth Street, to discuss means by which the bakers could continue to sell bread at the present price, maintain the standard of quality, and at the same time meet the increased costs of both raw material and labor.

Julius Barnes, President of the United States Grain Corporation, will address the bakers who sought the meeting.

Estimate Board Told $7,000,000 Was Appropriated Without Record to Show Vote.

The first row between the old and new members of the Board of Estimate developed at yesterday's meeting of the board when Controller Craig, Mayor Hylan, and Henry H. Curran, President of the Borough of Manhattan, got into an argument over the plans for the new county court house. President Curran asked where he could see the resolution passed by the board at its meeting on Dec. 30, when $7,000,000 was appropriated for the construction of the court house.

"I went to the office of the Secretary of the board and he told me he did not have it in his possession," said President Curran. "I would also like to see a copy of the report accompanying the resolution. As near as I can find out, the money was appropriated for this purpose without even so much as a piece of paper to show how it was voted."

"Every matter to which you refer is a matter of record," said Controller Craig, with a show of anger.

"Where is the record?" demanded Curran.

"In the Controller's office," replied Mr. Craig.

"Who has seen it?" the Borough President wanted to know.

"Everybody but you," snapped back the Controller.

"This practice of appropriating money without anything to show why or where it is to be spent ought to stop," said Mr. Curran. "With that end in view, I wish to offer an amendment to the rules. This board on Dec. 30 appropriated $7,000,000 without even a piece of paper going into the record. There was nothing but a brief item on the calendar and nothing to explain the matter."

"I'm going to stop you right now," replied the Controller, half rising in anger. "I resent your remarks and object to such loose talk or to any amendment to the rules being offered by you."

"Well, I want to see the report and the resolution," persisted President Curran. "I think it would be a good idea to let the public know where these papers are, so they may be seen if necessary."

Up to this time the Mayor had taken no part in the controversy, but turning to the Borough President he said:

"The public, Mr. Curran, knows all about it. Don't be an obstructionist."

"Oh, but this is good," chuckled Borough President Maurice Connolly of Queens, who sides with the Mayor in the board's disputes. Borough President Riegelmann of Brooklyn then made a point of order that the board was on roll call and the discussion was out of order. The Mayor sustained him and the discussion was put over until the end of the calendar was reached, when President Curran again asked the Controller when he could see the records.

"Any time you want to come to my office," said the Controller, and the discussion ended.

TELL THEIR STORIES OF MEXICAN ABUSES

Thirteen More Witnesses Heard by Fall Committee on Their Experiences.

MANY LOST ALL PROPERTY

Murder and Other Crimes Charged to Various Factions — Mexicans to be Heard Today.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 16.—The Senate committee which is investigating the Mexican problem heard today the testimony of thirteen American citizens who have suffered at the hands of Maderistas, Carranzistas, Villistas and other Mexican factions.

The most tragic of all the stories, however, came at the close of the afternoon session when Paul Metzenstin, a Texan, told of the outrageous treatment of which his mother and young sister were the victims, the soldiers who committed the crimes being Carranzistas under the command of Colonel Luis Espinoza of the Carranza army. His mother and sister, the boy testified, suffered the complete wreck of their health as a result of their harrowing experiences, his sister remaining to this day mentally far from normal.

The witnesses who were heard today in the order in which they testified were: J. D. Schulz of Iowa, W. E. Miller of Iowa, D. B. Ballinger of Missouri, C. W. Enders of Indiana, Paul C. Rennard of Texas, Miss Anita D'Arcy Wheatley of Texas, J. W. Handsy of Ohio, C. W. Gurley of Texas, J. D. Alden of Iowa, James E. Ellis of Texas, Mrs. A. S. McCain of Texas, D. R. McCormick of Maryland, and Paul Metzenstin of Texas.

All of these, with the exception of Mrs. McCain, are Americans who pioneered into Mexico and who are now refugees on the American side of the border.

Lost All in Train Robbery.

Mr. Schulz was the first witness called when the committee met at 10:20 o'clock this morning. With his wife and children Mr. Schulz went to Mexico in 1916. He then had between $2,000 and $3,000 which he invested in a small farm near the city of San Luis Potosi in the Mexican State of the same name.

"We had been given to understand," said Mr. Schulz, "that it was safe around San Luis Potosi and so my wife and I decided to buy a little place near San Luis Potosi and make it our home. We put all the money we had in the little ranch. We had been on it but a short time when the bandits and other outlaws began to harass us and steal our things. We stood it for a year and then, in 1917, we moved to another little place within the limits of the city of Mexico. In Mexico City our troubles continued.

"After we had been in Mexico City awhile we decided to try to sell our place at San Luis Potosi. My wife went up there to sell the property. She found a buyer who agreed to pay $2,000 for the place. They paid her in American money at the bank and she started for Mexico City. This was in April of last year. When my wife, who had our little child with her, arrived at Queretaro men entered the Pullman where she was and took the money away from her. They took every cent. They even stole her hat.

"I am of the opinion that the men who robbed my wife were tipped off by some one in San Luis Potosi who had information that she had been paid at the bank there."

The witness said he lost everything in Mexico.

"I was told down there," he said, "that representatives of Madero had said about the time Madero started his revolution that any one who joined the Maderistas could have all the loot he could get hold of."

Appealed to Taft for Protection.

The next witness was W. W. Miller, also from Iowa. Mr. Miller is a cattleman and went to Mexico in 1906 on an invitation extended by Porfirio Diaz. He said President Diaz assured the Americans, of whom the witness was one, that Mexico needed them as pioneers and that the Government would protect them in their property rights.

"When Madero came into power in 1911," said Mr. Miller, "they started raiding our property, which was about 250 miles southwest of Vera Cruz. As matters grew worse, I appealed to our Government in Washington, and considerable correspondence followed between President Taft and myself. I wrote Mr. Taft that we were Americans who had gone down there at the invitation of the Mexican Government, and that we were entitled to protection, both of life and property."

"Did President Taft extend the protection asked?" Senator Smith asked.

"He did not. We never got any protection of any sort from either the Taft or the Wilson Administrations," the witness answered.

D. B. Ballinger is a Missouri farmer who pioneered with his wife and seven children into the State of Chiapas in 1905. They were members of an American farm colony that at one time numbered more than 200 families. All of these families have been forced to leave Mexico and abandon all their property. All their improvements, houses, school, church, were obliterated.

C. W. Enders, who was born in Indiana, and lived in Mexico from 1891 to 1916, followed Mr. Ballinger. He was interested with R. A. Porter and Samuel Graham, also Americans, in ranch properties in Coahuila and Chihuahua. He was in Torreon during the Chinese massacre of May 13, 1911, and subsequent fights between the Federals and the rebels. He said the Chinese were absolutely helpless and 303 were slaughtered by a Madero army like so many cattle. Like all the rest who have testified, Mr. Enders said his property had been looted and that up to the present time the Mexican Government had made no reparation.

The last witness of the morning session was Miss Anita D'Arcy Wheatley of the Texas Department of Education.

Children Before a Firing Squad.

"My father is a physician," said Miss Wheatley, "and owned a dairy farm near Parral and a small ranch some forty miles from that place. My father lived on the ranch. My mother, and we children lived in Parral, my mother managing the dairy farm. We had no trouble of any sort until 1911. On the night of July 4, that year, my mother awoke to find her room full of men, all Mexicans. They demanded a rifle and pistol that we had, which we gave them, and then demanded $5,000, which, they said, was in the house. We had no such sum and told them so. We could not convince them and finally the leader ordered the men to take my two little sisters and myself out into the yard, stand us up against the wall and kill us. They stood us up as ordered, but for some reason or other decided not to kill us. One of them caught me by the throat and started to cut me with his knife. My brother, who was a little boy then, was ill of infantile paralysis and one of the Mexicans threatened to shoot him.

"We made a complaint and I identified the leader of the band that had robbed us and threatened our lives. They kept him in jail about a month and then let him go, and that was the end of it so far as the Mexicans were concerned.

"They have taken everything we had even to the fences around our ranch. We have filed a claim but have received no reparation of any sort."

The first witness at the afternoon session was J. M. Handsy, who is a native of Janesville, Ohio. Mr. Handsy was in Mexico from 1902 until 1917, most of the time as a railroad conductor. He was saved from death by hanging by Villa in a raid on Parral. A Villistas, he said, killed some forty Mexicans and hung George Smith, an employe of the National Mining and Smelting Company.

"I was captured with Smith," the witness went on, "and was also sentenced to be hung and the rope was around my neck when Pancho Villa rode up and ordered them to release me. The mark of the rope remained on my neck for a long time."

Mr. Handsy said he was in Chihuahua City in 1917, shortly after this country entered the European war.

"In Chihuahua," he said, "I found from twenty-five to fifty German expert mechanics at work in the Carranza arsenal in that city. Some of them had come from the United States. I lived at the same hotel they did and ate at the same restaurants."

Villa told him, said Mr. Handsy, that he had hidden away between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 worth of bullion.

C. W. Gurley of Del Rio, Texas, the next witness, leased a ranch some years ago in the State of Coahuila. He has lost through theft cattle and property valued at about $40,000. The Carranza authorities in Coahuila have never made any attempt to protect him or his property, the witness said.

J. D. Alden of Iowa went into Mexico in 1908. First settled in Guadalajara and afterwards in Morelos.

"The Zapatistas," he said, "cleaned me out of everything I had. The only reason they did not kill me was because I posed as a Canadian. I was sentenced to death and when I pleaded that I was a British subject the leader of the band said: 'That being the case we won't kill him, but we will take what he has,' and that's what they did. My partners and I lost between us about $25,000."

James E. Ellis told of the confiscation of his restaurant in Matamoros, which was reopened with Colonel Luis Rendon of the Carranza Army as the new proprietor. He lost about $7,000, which was all he had, he said.

Mrs. A. H. McCain, the widow of Dr. Eugene S. McCain who was the Texas quarantine officer at Brownsville, testified that her husband was taken from a train and executed by Mexican bandits on the American side of the border.

D. R. McCormick, a native of Maryland, a cattleman, was superintendent of an American-owned property in Northern Chihuahua. His son was thrice kidnapped. Inez Salazar held him first for $5,000. The Maximo Castillo band kidnapped him the second time, and the third time he was captured along with Vice President Stevens of the company by another band, the name of which Mr. McCormick did not remember. The second ransom was $2,500 and third $3,000.

"How many times did they capture Stevens?" asked Senator Fall.

"I think only twice."

"What about the negro named Warren. Was he not also captured?"

"Yes, sir, they got Bunk, as we called him, and the company had to pay $5,000 to get him back.

"Arthur McKinney also was captured. He was executed by Villistas. An American boy named Crawford was executed with him, while another American, Mr. Kingsburry, who was there, disappeared and has never since been heard of."

The next and last witness was Paul Metzenstin. With his father, mother, two brothers and sister, he went to Mexico in 1913. The Metzenstins were members of the Richardson colony of about 200 American farmers and their families. The colony was located on the Yaqui River in Sonora, about fifty miles from Guaymas. The first raid occurred in May, 1913. The raiders were Yaqui soldiers of the Carranza Army, and were commanded by Colonel Luis Espinoza. The witness's mother and sister, only 14 years old, suffered so terribly from the brutalities of the raiders that neither has ever recovered.

Both sessions of the committee tomorrow will be executive. The witnesses who will be heard are understood to include several Mexican citizens whose identity will not be disclosed. The testimony will be made public probably tomorrow night. The public sessions will be resumed on Monday morning.

CABRERA REBUFFS FALL.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 16 (via Galveston).—Luis Cabrera, Secretary of the Treasury, has sent this answer to Senator Fall's invitation to go to San Antonio:

"I acknowledge receipt of your telegram of yesterday and am very sorry that you have not taken my telegram in the sense and spirit in which it was sent, thatis to say as a really sincere and candid invitation that you would visit and see our country.

"Your telegram, declining my invitation, is, nevertheless, the most illuminating document that could have been written, since it gives us the opportunity of knowing the purpose of the investigation that you are carrying on.

"The fac is that the Government of Mexico could not invite you to come and have conferences with the rebels, but we invited you to travel and see the country, and I can assur you that there is not a railway line, where you could not go in a special car under the protection fo our troops, if you consider it essential to know what the opinion is of such and such a group of rebels, and if you think that the best way of ascertaining the real conditions of our country is to listen to reports instead of really and actually seeing the way the nation is living and working.

"I do not believe that we can be useful to you. I do not think that, being as you are a man of very independent character, you would not be able to see the truth, even though you were our guest. I am very sorry that I cannot accept your invitation to go to San Antonio and, in fact, I do not see any purpose for a trip since my opinion has been perfectly consistent on the point that the investigation that the Senate is carrying on is contrary to international principles and to the respect due to the sovereignty of my country.

"I welcome the opportunity to have the chance given me of saying a few words and of knowing the true object of the investigation.

"Hoping to meet you personally some time in the future, I am,

SIX MORE RADICALS LEAVE ELLIS ISLAND

Set Free on Bail, and Two Score More Probably Will Be Released Today.

DEPORTATIONS MAY CEASE

Educational Program for Aliens Advocated by Pedagogues Before the Lusk Committee.

Of more than fifty cases of aliens held at Ellis Island for alleged sedition activities who were made eligible for bail by Judge Knox's decision, only six left the island yesterday, the others being delayed by the time consumed in drawing up the necessary papers. Thousands of dollors worth of Liberty Bonds were taken to the immigration station to supply bail, most of it being in the possession of Rose Weiss, representing the law office of Charles Recht, Attorney. She stated that she had $42,000 in bonds.

The first of the aliens to leave the island was Sam Tanklow, bailed out by Joseph R. Brodsky of 277 Broadway. Gustav Pasternak and Michael Angel of Trenton were bailed out by E. Friedman and William Reich, an attorney of Trenton. When the last boat left at 4 o'clock, Miss Weiss took with her William and Anna Bailen and Minnie Rachelson of Newark, and Jeannette Siegel. Miss Weiss promised to be back this morning in time to have forty-six more of her clients released in time to catch the noon boat. Only a handful of relatives and friends were present at the barge office yesterday afternoon to greet the released prisoners. It was again stated by lawyers on the island yesterday that they expected the majority of those released on bail never to be deported.

It is believed among army officers in the Port of Embarkation Headquarters, in Hoboken, that probably there will not be another Soviet Ark to carry Reds to Russia. They believe that within a short time the excitement over the Reds will abate considerably, and that it will be aided by reaction from the action of the Assembly in refusing to seat the five Socialists elected last Fall. In addition, the army men expect a great many men held as a result of the Red raids to be released on habeas corpus writs.

If there should be another Soviet Ark, it was learned from an authoritative military source, it probably will be the "Presidential ship," the George Washington, which is at Pier 2, Army Base, Brooklyn.

In the United States District Court yesterday, Judge John C. Knox reserved decision in the petition for writs of habeas corpus by Martin De Wal, known as "The Man Without a Country," and Alexis Georgian, a Minneapolis radical. De Wal, who alleges he is a native of Holland, was arrested in Seattle in February, 1918, and has been in custody on Ellis Island for one year. Attorney Charles Recht state that the Holland authorities had refused to allow him to land in that country, as they could find no record of his having been born there. Mr. Recht said that as there was no place they could send him, it was illegal for the immigration authorities to detain him. United States District Attorney David Cahill said the Department of Labor was willing to release him on a bond of $5,000. Judge Knox thought that amount excessive and reserved decision.

At a session of the Lusk Committee held yesterday in City Hall several educators gave their views as to possible methods of combating radical ideas through educational measures. At the end of the session it was the consensus among the members of the committee that the witnesses had practically agreed that in order to inculcate into the foreigner a better understanding of things American an educational program along American lines should be adopted. Nearly all of those who testified brought out the fact that in order to obtain the highest type of instructor higher character standards must be maintained and better compensation must be awarded to those who make teaching their life work. The members of the committee also felt that a wide divergence of opinion had been shown on the necessity of compulsory education of foreign adults under forty-five years of age.

Among those who testified were Arthur Frothingham, for more than twenty years a professor of ancient history and archaeology at Princeton University; Dr. Peter Roberts of Mount Vernon, Secretary of the Committee of Immigration of the Y. M. C. A.; Dr. Millard L. Robinson of the Methodist Episcopal Church; the Rev. Kenneth D. Miller, Associate Director of English Education of the Presbyterian Church; Dr. Thomas Buga, Burgess of the Americanization Committee of the Episcopal Church; Dr. Frank Blodgett, President of Adelphi College; John J. Coss of the Teachers' Extension Department of Columbia University, and Dr. Lee Galloway of New York University.

Another session will be held at 10:30 o'clock this morning, at which other educators will testify, among them being possibly Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University.

The "Soviet Ark" Buford, with her passenger list of 249 deported extremists, passed between the Island of Gotland and the Swedish coast yesterday, heading northward in the Baltic Sea, according to a wireless message giving the ship's position received here today.

The route of the Buford since leaving Kiel supports previous predictions that she is heading for Hango or another of the ports of Finland.

Federal Court Sentences Syracuse Men for Violating Espionage Act.

UTICA, N. Y., Jan. 16.—Charles W. Steene, Frank L. Preston and William Hotze, Syracuse Socialists, convicted of violating the Espionage act on four counts, were sentenced by Judge Garvin, in the United States court here today, to serve one year and six months in the Atlanta Penitentiary on each count, the sentences to run concurrently.

SINN FEINERS WIN MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

They Obtain Preponderant Vote in South Ireland, and Even Some Ulster Seats.

DUBLIN, Jan. 16.—Preliminary returns in the municipal elections in Dublin show successes for the Sinn Fein candidates. Three Sinn Fein members of the House of Commons were elected on the first count, including Alderman Tom Kelly, now in prison in London, who obtained more than three times the necessary vote.

Lord Mayor O'Neill, whose term expired, although running as an independent candidate, scored a record poll, due to the fact, it was said, that he supported Sinn Fein candidates in other sections.

Results from the country districts of Ireland indicate that the preponderance of the vote went to the Sin Fein aspirants, and it is considered certain that the party, together with Labor, will have a considerable majority outside of Ulster.

Contests in Ulster between Unionists and Nationalists were close in all sections. These parties united to oppose the Sinn Feiners, several of whom were elected despite efforts to defeat them.

The Government offered today to restore the printing machinery of the Freeman's Journal, recently seized on the ground that the seizure was in the interest of public good. The offer was on condition that the proprietors would sign an agreement regarding the future conduct of the newspaper. They refused and the supression order remains in effect.

Results thus far received in the Skibbereen elections show that two Sinn Feiners, two Laborites, four Constitutional Nationalists and one Independent have been successful.

Sinn Feiner Arrested.

STRANE, Ireland, Jan. 16. — Dan Doherty, President of the Sinn Fein Club here, was arrested today by armed police while counting votes cast in Thursday's election. It was stated that he would be deported to England. The populace assumed a threatening attitude toward the police and trouble is anticipated.

REPORT THE HERALD BROUGHT $4,300,000

NONCOMMITTAL ON PLANS

Publisher Gives No Intimation as to Whether He Will Continue Publication.

Frank A. Munsey, buyer of The New York Herald properties, makes the following announcement in The Sun this morning regarding The Herald. Of his plans with regard to the other Bennett publications, The New York Evening Telegram and the Paris edition of The New York Herald, Mr. Munsey makes no statement. The Sun says:

CONCERNING THE HERALD.

While I have not yet gone very far in the matter of getting acquainted with The Herald from the inside of its office, I may say even now that so far as concerns any act of mine the name New York Herald is immortal. I am led to say this because of the extraordinary interest—the worldwide interest in fact—that has been manifested in the future of this newspaper.

FRANK A. MUNSEY.

Only the bare statement appears in The Sun. The New York Herald reprints it without addition or comment.

Mr. Munsey's failure to make known at this time his plans for the future of The New York Evening Telegram and the Paris Edition of The New York Herald was taken as an indication that he is still undecided as to whether he will continue their publication. He said yesterday at his offices, 280 Broadway:

"My plans are not ready to announce yet. Of course I know there is great interest regarding the future of The Herald, but I have had little opportunity as yet to familiarize myself with the property."

The price paid for the Bennett properties was said yesterday to have been $4,300,000. When Mr. Munsey was asked to verify this figure, he said: "I do not believe the public is interested in the price." The information regarding the price came from two independent sources, both of which are regarded as authoritative.

Mr. Munsey, since his purchase of The Herald, has made a thorough inspection of the plant and has conferred with the heads of different departments of the paper with regard to the details of its administration. He is said to have expressed general satisfaction with their methods. He was engaged yesterday with executives of his various enterprises, among them Robert C. Davis, in a study of conditions affecting his plans.

Reports that outside parties participated with Mr. Munsey in the purchase of The Herald were characterized as absurd by persons familiar with Mr. Munsey's interests. "In all his activities Mr. Munsey has had sole direction," it was said. The New York Herald in its editorial Thursday, commenting on the sale, said Mr. Munsey had no partners in the ownership of The Herald.

TO LESSEN COST OF ROADS.

Commissioner Would Have State Buy Highways Materials.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—Legislation designed to permit purchase by the State of road machinery and other materials used in road construction as a means of reducing the cost to the State is urged in the annual report of Frederick Stuart Greene, State Highway Commissioner, submitted to the Legislature today.

"Under the present form of contract the State makes with the highway contractors," the commissioner says, "I figure the State would be saving $750,000 if a change is made in the highway law."

Commissioner Greene recommends that, when the connected system of highways is completed, the State confine its activities to the improvement of through State routes and the more important county routes and that the feeders to the main highways be constructed and maintained by the counties.

During the eight and one-half months Commissioner Greene has been in office a construction record was made in the department, the report says. Two hundred and sixty contracts for constructing and improving 1,479 miles of roads at a cost of $22,631,150.71 were awarded.

Commissioner Greene reports that the advent of the motor truck has made the building of a more permanent type of pavement an economical necessity.

"Road patrolmen," the report says, "will hereafter be appointed upon their efficiency records and ability instead of upon the recommendation of county committeemen representing the party in power."

The report concludes: "After the 1920 highway program is completed there will still remain unconstructed of the system as originally planned 882 miles of State routes and 2,432 miles of State and county highways for the construction of which the Legislature will have to provide funds."

Spain Bans Sunday Papers.

The decree will not come into effect for fifteen days, and in the meantime may be modified, as a number of newspaper proprietors have made suggestions that are being considered by the Government.

MOVE TO RESTRAIN RICHMOND LINES

City Will Ask for Stay or a Friendly Receiver to Run Midland Railway Company.

Information that the Staten Island Midland Railway Company would suspend operation of its various lines at midnight tomorrow, thereby leaving about 17,000 persons without transportation, stirred the Board of Estimate yesterday into directing Corporation Counsel Burr either to obtain an injunction to restrain the company from going out of business or to apply for a receiver for the property. The company had appealed to the board for a seven-cent fare on the ground that the company was losing upwards of $100,000 a year.

Last night Bertram A. Eadie, counsel for the company, said that the action of the board would not affect the situation. He said that the trolley lines would cease at one minute after 12 o'clock Monday morning, that later in the day the board would be notified that the company desired to surrender its franchises, and that an application would be made to the courts for a receiver to wind up the company's affairs. This program, he explained, had been agreed upon by the Board of Directors.

Motorists Contest Hugo Ruling.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—A saving of approximately $250,000 a year to New York city automobile owners will be sought through court action to be initiated by the New York State Automobile Association against Secretary of State Hugo, to compel him to charge but $1 for operators' renewal licenses instead of the $2 now charged. Announcement of this was made here this afternoon by Melvin T. Bender, counsel for the automobile association. Automobilists claim that the law, which was enacted last year, specifically states that the fee for renewing licenses for automobile operators in New York City shall be $1, and for chauffeurs $2.

HAT Palestine, revered mother land of three great religions, should at last receive back to her bosom the wide-scattered people whose zeal inspired them has been the promise of the prophets and the dream of the ages. Once more among the nations is destined to stand Israel.

To all of us, the Jewish question is one of the world's great sociological problems. The summary of the sufferings of the Jews is the outstanding tragedy of all time.

Crushed by the successive conquests of five empires, flung in fragments out over the whole face of the earth, and to suffer persecution in every clime, their speech broken into a thousand tongues, still, for twenty centuries they have held sacred the ideal of Israel and the passion for the Homeland.

Israel, two thousand years dormant, is rising.

Zionism, long a mystic hope, but now a practical movement with a definite program, is making real its aim to make of Palestine once more a Jewish land—Jewish in the sense that the majority of its people shall be Jews, and in the sense that the predominant culture shall be Hebrew culture.

The world war has forced a universal realization of the inherent right of all peoples to racial self-expression. Out of the travail has sprung Israel of the world's yesterday, today and to-morrow, to stand again as a sign and a symbol.

Not only has Jewry organized to this end, but also great democratic governments of the world have definitely given their approval and pledges of assistance. In the minds of the American people it is an accepted fundamental principle of right.

Israel Restored expresses, to Jew and non-Jew alike, the fulfillment of inspired promise and makes real in our own day a soul dream of the ages.

The Salient of Gloom Smashed to Pieces

THOMAS HEALY, who has catered to the American public for a quarter of a century—both as a restaurateur and creator of novel entertainments—announces the continuance of the same splendid policy that has made his restaurant enterprises famous the world over.

Conceding to the wishes of our best citizens, who demand wholesomeness in entertainment as well as food, this pioneer has readjusted his establishments, arranged a program to meet the new conditions of the amusement loving public, in an earnest endeavor to counteract the Puritan ideas of those who would destroy the liberties that are our heritage.

The entire four floors of the Healy building will radiate with entertainment such as has never before been offered outside the continental halls of Europe. Novelty and individuality will be the keynotes of this new policy. The same excellent standard of the best food at moderate prices will prevail in the future as in the past.

From the above resume one can readily appreciate that Thomas Healy is planning a campaign of amusement that should bring that elusive Blue Bird—symbol of Happiness—nearer our reach than ever before.

A New Electric Grill

has been installed in main dining room, where guests can make their own selections of the delicacies of the market from huge larders. The Cafe has been converted into a business men's and women's luncheon place, reviving the chop and oyster counter idea familiarly known to old New Yorkers.

SETTING ASIDE CLEMENCEAU.

The proverbial ingratitude of republics played little part in the vote of the joint preliminary caucus of the French Senators and Deputies yesterday by which Mr. CLEMENCEAU was defeated as candidate for the nomination for President of France by Mr. DESCHANEL, President of the Chamber of Deputies. Mr. DESCHANEL had 408 votes to 389 for Mr. CLEMENCEAU. The French people, we are sure, would have sustained the great Prime Minister's candidacy by an impressive majority. The people of France are not so cold-hearted nor so fickle as to have forgotten that it was the genius and the firm hand of CLEMENCEAU that organized the nation for victory and by his heroic example inspired Frenchmen to brave the perils and meet the sacrifices demanded of them by the struggle with Germany.

Nor is it possible to see in the result any sudden lurch toward socialism. Although DESCHANEL was ardently supported by the radicals, who were jubilant at his triumph, it must not be forgotten that only two months ago France repudiated the Unified Socialists, who had gone over to Bolshevism under their leader, JEAN LONGUET. The non-socialist Bloc National of the Deputies chosen in the November elections made up about three-fourths of the Chamber. Our correspondent, Mr. JAMES, in his cable to THE TIMES published on Nov. 17 said: "France "has given a crushing reply to the "appeal of Bolshevism. In yesterday's elections, with a voice heard "around the world, she repudiated "Sovietism and all it stands for."

Mere petulance and personal antagonism probably played a large part in this unexpected decision of the caucus. The war is over, peace has been proclaimed, the nation is no longer in danger, and Senators and Deputies felt free to give play to their personal feelings; and as may well be imagined, the sensibilities of a good many members of the Senate and of the Chamber must have been ruffled by the Tiger. His is a tremendously strong personality, and that often makes for enmities; besides, he has commanded support by sheer moral and intellectual force rather than by the art of the politician. He has little time to waste in soft flatteries and propitiations. Many of those who took part in the caucus may simply have been tired of his dominance, of hearing it said always that CLEMENCEAU was France.

Whatever the motives of the chosen representatives of the people who have declined to pay this last civic honor to GEORGES CLEMENCEAU, they have made a mistake that has harmed them rather than him. Though the Presidency of France would have been, as we have said, the last honor, it could not have been the crowning honor. That was bestowed upon CLEMENCEAU and nobly and valiantly worn and justified while he held the more important post of Prime Minister. The world will be disappointed, and not a little shocked, by this unexpected rebuff of a statesman of whom it was said only a few days ago that his election might be unanimous. Of Mr. DESCHANEL no ill will be said or felt, but he is a star of less magnitude than the rival he has overcome, and there is no reason to believe that he has won his victory on anything like a fair comparison of merit. The support the radicals gave him may have been due less to fellow-feeling than to dislike of CLEMENCEAU. But the dominant note among the people of the world outside of France will be one of regret that so many of the Senators and Deputies should have been capable of withholding this last reward and gratification from a statesman who has deserved everything of France. We believe the vote of the caucus misrepresents the French people, and we hope it may be reversed in the election today.

RAILWAY MAIL PAY.

When the Post Office proposed to pay the railways for the carriage of the mails by the space provided and used, rather than by the weights carried, the criticism was made that it was a method of reducing the payments to the railways rather than of bettering the service. The railways appealed to the Interstate Commerce Commission, which now has rendered a decision confirming the space system, but raising the rate to be paid for it in a way likely to make the Post Office feel that there was more merit in the weight system than it thought. The Commission approves the space system, and orders its extension to all mail routes, with payment for many services which the Post Office has required without payment. The Commission says that the records do not enable an exact comparison of the costs of the two systems; "it seems "probable, however, that the total ex"pense attendant upon the adminis"tration of the two services is about "the same." The decision reopens the account to the date of the starting of the space system, 1916, with an increase of 25 per cent. beginning with 1918.

It is notorious that the mails have increased in amount, and it is on the record that the mail pay dropped from $59,128,692 in 1917 to $54,953,183 in 1918. The payments to the railways in 1918 were below any year since 1913, and were only a little above those for the depressed year 1907. Yet during those eleven years postal revenues increased 112 per cent., and the mail burden on the railways increased 150 per cent. through the establishment of the parcel post. In other words, the railways did the work, the Post Office claimed the credit, and boasted of a profit made by not paying honest bills. The readjustment of the accounts will give the Director General a windfall, and will relieve the taxpayers to that extent. We shall have to wait for the Postmaster General's next report to learn what happened to his profits. If he is content to drop the subject there will be no objection, provided that he or his successor does not reopen it.

JAPAN AND SIBERIA.

Our Japanese friends seem to have been surprised and disturbed at the news that we were to take our nine thousand soldiers out of Siberia; so surprised and disturbed that they are now talking about taking out their own army of sixty or seventy thousand, or perhaps more by this time, and leaving Siberia to the Bolsheviki. The recent memorandum sent by the Japanese Government to our own, according to dispatches from Tokio, was based on the evident need of setting up something to take the place of KOLCHAK'S army to bar the advance of Bolshevism to the Pacific. This was a matter in which America had considerable interest and Japan an enormous interest, and while it is now evident that the Bolshevist march to Vladivostok could have been more easily and profitably stopped somewhere about Samara in the Summer of 1918, there was no use crying over spilt milk. KOLCHAK'S army had been destroyed and something had to be done.

Sentiment in Japan was divided as to just what ought to be done. Premier HARA has been no enthusiast, we are told, for the occupation of Siberia; Foreign Minister UCHIDA and others thought that at any rate enough troops were there now without sending more; but the War Ministry wanted to send more. So the Japanese asked if we thought the allied Governments ought to get out, send more troops, or let things go on as at present.

Now that we say that for our part we are going to get out, there is reported to be much surprise and dissatisfaction in Japan. "It is improbable," says a dispatch, "that "Japan will attempt single-handed "to stem the Bolshevist advance." This is a high compliment to our nine thousand, if the Japanese do not feel like keeping up the campaign without them. Mr. HARA'S Siberian policy has been much criticised, and he may be forced to resign.

Mr. HARA has said, it happens, that Japan does not want one foot of Siberian territory and will withdraw every soldier when the Bolshevist danger has passed. That was a welcome announcement to the whole world. But it is said that the present Japanese expeditionary force costs a hundred million dollars a year; that if the thing were done thoroughly, on the scale which would be necessary to stop the Bolsheviki, it would cost five hundred millions. That is a great deal of money even in our inflated time, and the Japanese are apparently wondering what they will get for it. Moreover, their troops do not like the cold weather and have to be relieved frequently.

These are perhaps strong arguments for getting out, but it will be surprising if they prevail. Japan does not want Bolshevism at Vladivostok; a crusading movement which knows how to use disaffection everywhere would work powerfully in Korea and China, perhaps even among the Japanese laboring classes. The prospective expense is a great deal of money to spend, to be sure, but it is in the nature of a fire-insurance premium. And it may be that the magnitude of the task is somewhat overestimated. LENIN can have little enthusiasm for a campaign east of Lake Baikal, when there is the prospect of much more brilliant successes with less effort in Central Asia, and still more to gain in Europe. If he should win elsewhere, he could come back to Japan at his leisure; meanwhile the likelihood of an offensive is not great. Perhaps if the Japanese saw a prospect of getting back the money invested in the army of occupation they would be more enthusiastic; perhaps the dissatisfaction with the Premier's Siberian policy rests on his frank statement that Japan does not expect to keep anything by way of compensation.

THE TRIAL OF WILLIAM OF HOHENZOLLERN.

In a note to the Government of the Netherlands the Supreme Council asks it to join the victorious Allies in the accomplishment of their purpose to try WILLIAM II. of Hohenzollern, formerly German Emperor, "for a supreme "offense against international moral"ity and the sanctity of treaties." In the language of Article 227 of the Treaty of Peace, "the tri"bunal will be guided by the high"est motives of international policy "with a view to vindicating the sol"emn obligation of international un"dertakings and the validity of inter"national morality." The final duty will be to fix the punishment that should be imposed.

It has been said that there is no precedent in international law to sanction the proceeding so necessary if an example is to be made of WILLIAM II. as the sovereign responsible for the war that cost the world such terrible sacrifices and left so much of it in ruins. The same thing might have been said of the imprisonment of NAPOLEON at St. Helena by the British Government with the approval of its allies. Together they made international law for the imperative occasion. Elba had been a brief exile. NAPOLEON could not be contained there. It was the will of the associated Powers after Waterloo that he be imprisoned under guard so far from the scenes of his exploits and baleful glory that he would never be able to return to set Europe in turmoil and drench it with blood again.

The design of the Allies who overthrew Germany and disarmed her in the twentieth century is to make military aggression odious by punishing the German Emperor for his misdeeds after full and fair trial. Sovereignty he has none today. His status is that of a fugitive from the righteous wrath of the Allies. Holland can refuse to extradite him on the ground that he has committed no crime recognized by her code. On the other hand, Holland may decide to give him up because he is indictable by the Allies, who stood between her and the menace of subjugation by Germany and fought her fight as well as their own, for crimes against international morality and the sanctity of treaties. It is not a case for technicalities, but one for the establishment of a historic precedent.

That nations are sometimes called upon to make new international law in a grave emergency there is the intervention of France, Russia, and Great Britain in the war between Greece and Turkey in the early part of the last century to show. Navarino freed Greece from bondage. The blow was deliberately struck by nations that had no individual cause for war with Turkey. Today there is general agreement with the verdict of Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT that "the eman"cipation of Greece was a high act of "policy above and beyond the domain "of law." There is no precedent in international law for the trial of WILLIAM of Hohenzollern. For the future welfare of humanity and in the performance of a solemn duty the Allies in careful deliberation at Paris decided to make a precedent, and in pursuance of a just purpose they ask Holland to yield the fugitive to be tried before a great tribunal for the offenses with which he is charged.

THE WATER POWER BILL.

For one remembers not how many years the necessary development of the water power of the United States, made more and more necessary by the war and the price of coal, has hung powerless in Congress. Divers interesting, influential but scarcely practical varieties of conservationists have been scandalized by the notion that anybody should make money out of the development of water power. That it is a great business and industrial form of power has escaped the virtuous. At last the Senate, by a vote of substantially 3 to 1, has passed the Water Power Development bill, not quite the same as the bill passed by the House last Summer, but agreeing with it so essentially that there should be little trouble about the settlement, in conference, of the differences between the House and the Senate.

The Senate bill provides for a Federal Water Power Commission, consisting of the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Secretary of Agriculture, authorized, after due investigation, to issue licenses, running for fifty years, to develop water power projects "for a reasonable annual charge." The bill directs the Federal Commission to cooperate with the States and Federal agencies. Industrial plants which develop less than 200 horse power are not required to pay a license, and no charge is to be made for State or municipal power projects. At the expiration of any license the Federal Government is to have the power, after having given a written notice of two years, to assume and operate plants. Existing plants, of course, are not subject to the restrictions of the bill, and at the end of the proposed fifty-year license the Federal Government is to have three options in regard to every water power project: It may make the plant its own; it may issue a new license; it may allow operation under the original license.

In consequence the differences between the two houses, none of them relating to essentials, should easily be disposed of. The country has waited so long for a wise and practical water power development that it would have little patience with the extremists who insist upon the longer ventilation of their peculiar views. Water power development will bring about not only a saving of coal and a diminution of coal prices, but the same saving and diminution of the price of oil. It cannot help resulting in a reduced cost of transportation service and a more effective transportation service. It cannot help bringing about, as the report of the Senate Committee on Commerce said last Fall, "the develop"ment of new industries, the building "up of new communities, the crea"tion of new property values, subject "to taxation for the support and "maintenance of local and State Gov"ernments, and added employment "for labor and increased markets for "agricultural products." Year after year an immense amount of money has been sacrificed on account of the differences of opinion in regard to the best form of water power regulation. At last we are approaching it. We have a practicable scheme. It invites private capital to develop our water power resources. At the same time it contemplates, or makes possible, ultimate public ownership. The sooner the House and the Senate, dropping all their unessential differences, insure this long-delayed vital work of great public improvement, the better for the United States.

THROUGH THE DREAM STRATUM.

Sir OLIVER LODGE expressly disclaims the black magic which Owen Glendower vaunted. He cannot call spirits from the vasty deep. "If they don't want to come, we can't make them." But he is equally far removed from Hotspur's skeptical scorn. A respectful invitation to the spirits is accepted by some. It is true that they speak "an awful lot of rubbish"; but, as Sir OLIVER explains, they apparently find that necessary to the process of identifying themselves.

Some few of them talk philosophy and theology. From these he has gleaned details as to the future life. As far as he has learned, there is no hell, and his own mind is firmly set against any "place of permanent badness." He is equally in doubt as to the other place, the place of permanent goodness. When we die, except for the loss of a material body, the order is apparently a military "As you were!" The spirits who come when he invites them tell of "trees and flowers and animals." The other side, Sir OLIVER sometimes thinks, is "still this side seen from another "point of view—it may be this same "old world." Their trees, flowers, and animals are thus our trees, flowers, and animals. Apparently they are as little discommoded by our presence as we are by theirs. When one considers the multitude of generations that have passed beyond, however, the available trees, flowers, and animals must be pretty well thronged. Yet we hear of no ghostly park policeman bidding them "Move on!"

Sir OLIVER'S physics of the ghostly Central Park is equally simple and inviting. The inhabitants are made of ether. There are, he admits, scientists who "do not take ether into account "or deny its existence because they "cannot perceive it. But ether is, "and worlds move through it. We "infer the ether; it is the connecting "link between the worlds and blends "them all into a cosmos." Having inferred ether, nothing is more natural than to infer that ether is what spirits are made of. No explanation of the marvelous is half as satisfying as the still more marvelous.

The science of psychology gives Sir OLIVER a little more difficulty. All the phenomena of spiritualism, including apparently distinct "personalities" who talk marvels, read minds, and give an occasional instance of prophecy, have been paralleled in the laboratory by men who more prosaically explain the mysterious only in terms of the known. To these men they are manifestations of a region of the mind which was once mysterious, but which, under their researches, is every year becoming a little more definitely ascertained. Sir OLIVER LODGE is aware of the subconscious mind and very poetically calls it "the dream stratum." But instead of regarding it as a thing capable of developing cleverly mendacious "subconscious personalities," he chooses to regard it as a mere medium through which the ether spirits pass their messages. It may be so. Few trained minds indulge in universal negatives. But the spiritualistic hypothesis differs from the hypothesis of ether in the fact that its phenomena have another and a more familiar explanation.

Many men, many minds. Some men and women are unhappy without an assurance of immortality which seems based upon ascertained fact. That is quite intelligibly human. To others, the permanence of the human spirit is a conviction so wonderful that mediumistic "rubbish" can only belittle it, a conviction so sure that it does not need demonstration.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

His Appeal Also Is to Sentiment.

Wiser than not a few of the people who have discussed the question whether or not the bodies of the American soldiers who died in France and are now buried there shall be brought back to the United States, Bishop BRENT, the senior chaplain of the A. E. F., bases his argument against removal on the same sentiments that have led some of the bereaved relatives to demand it.

The "practical" considerations—the suspicion that underlying some of the insistence on a return of the bodies is the fact that it means profit to large numbers of undertakers, and the probability that mistakes of identification will be made in the performance of a task so large and difficult—the Bishop passes in silence. Instead, he dwells feelingly on the plans of the American Field of Honor Association for treating with reverence and tenderness the graves in France. The purpose, as he explains it, is to perpetuate there the memory of the fallen—to show appreciation of their sacrifices and their services—in a way and to a degree impossible if the heroic ashes are distributed through all the cemeteries of the United States.

The sorrowing relatives of the dead he asks, by implication, to decide whether they prefer the personal consolations and satisfactions they themselves can derive from the sense of nearness and the care which they can give for a brief time to the grave of a son or a husband, or whether what they desire is the permanent guarding and honoring which the congregated graves would get in France. This is a serious question, and while it is a worthy sentiment that demands the keeping of the Government's promise to bring back these bodies, is it not a sentiment still more worthy that consents to allow the dead to remain where their fame can best be preserved through the centuries to come?

We Should Hear the Soldiers.

As Bishop BRENT points out, the removal of the American dead from France will separate each of them from the comrades in whose company he served his country and died for it. That is a dissociation not lightly to be advocated, for the relation between the men who participated actively in the World War is a close and peculiar one.

And it is a notable fact that, though the returned soldiers seemingly hesitate to express any strong opinion as to the disposition to be made of those who perished, when the survivors do speak it is usually to advise that those who fell be allowed to sleep where they are, undisturbed. Their views are as worthy of attention as are those of the bereaved relatives, and, as the latter have taken what amounts to a vote on the subject, the living soldiers might properly exercise the same privilege. They know better than do the relatives what removal would involve, and if their verdict were adverse it might lead to a reconsideration of the matter by many of those who now are favorable to the transfer.

At any rate, the Field of Honor Association is not cold or unfeeling in its view of what should be done. Its members do not think in terms of money, and their patriotism and disinterestedness cannot be impugned.

By Waiting We May Save Money!

It may be with the best and kindest of intentions that now one and now another group of dealers in the necessaries of life are warning all and sundry to buy at once, for before long prices are going to be much higher. If that is true—and sad experience tells us that in all probability it is—then the advice is excellent for those with money enough to follow it, and they should be grateful to those who give it.

But when the dealers say that prices are going up, a keen ear hears in the words something a little different—something like "We are going to put prices up"—and the attentive listener cannot help wondering whether the elevation is enforced by the inexorable laws of nature, as is the familiar implication of those who talk about prices, or whether the impetus comes from the very human desire to make a lot of profit whenever the opportunity to do so exists or can be made.

Some such thought as this must account for the fact that one of the Attorney General's assistants has not taken the news that clothes are soon to be much more costly than now as a reason for buying at present prices, but as a reason for warning the clothiers that he doubts the necessity or justification for a raise. He says, on the contrary, that their prices are already too high and their profits too large, and his own impression is that before long prices are coming down.

That seems too good to be true, but strange things do happen in Chicago, and it was there that the warning of the warners has taken place.

A Conclusion Reached Too Soon.

With Admiral SIMS only one of several eminent correspondents of THE TIMES insisting that both Professor GODDARD and JULES VERNE were right in claiming propulsive efficacy for explosions in a vacuum, there seems to be no escape from confessing that a recent denial of that efficacy, made in this far from infallible column, was—well, call it of dubious accuracy.

Probably these critics won't be content to let the matter go at that, but even the most confident of them will have to admit that a vacuum is not a very good thing for an explosive, or anything else, to push against—not, that is, if what one wants is "reaction."

THE HAPPY WARRIOR.

There grew upon a hillside fair
A mullein tall and straight;
A sentinel it seemed to stand,
In lonely, silent state.
The grazing cattle spared its stalk,
To crop more humble weed,
And left it in its ripe old age,
Unharmed to go to seed.

And long it stood, the mullein straight,
Upon the hillside fair,
The shadows came, the shadows went;
It did not seem to care.
When dew and rain refreshing fell,
With thanks it seemed to dine,
And when the skies withheld their showers
It did not droop nor pine.

Through Autumn days it flourished on,
This mullein sentinel;
Though Summer comrades soon were gone,
And leaves about it fell.
And when the white flakes covered all
The grass of sunny hill,
It stood on guard above the snow,
A cheerful soldier still.

COLONEL ROBINS'S POSITION

His Views on Bolshevism and His Republican Connection.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE NEW YORK TIMES of Dec. 29 appeared a letter by the Rev. William Pierson Merrill defending Raymond Robins, whose appointment to the Advisory Committee on Platform of the Republican Party had been criticised by a correspondent on the grounds that Robins "is today one of the main props of the radical movement and his misrepresentations are being utilized by pro-Bolshevist agitators everywhere." Dr. Merrill said: "To represent him as a Socialist or as 'one of the main props of the radical movement' betrays ignorance that is almost inexcusable. He has said things about Russia which have antagonized many in this country. It still remains to be seen whether he or they are right. I would challenge the writer of that letter to produce anything specific, authoritatively quoted from what Raymond Robins has said, that is antagonistic to patriotic Americanism or that reveals him as covering his convictions to suit his audience."

Having heard Mr. Robins's speech before the Republican County Committee, and having previously read and analyzed his testimony before the Overman Senate committee last Spring, I can testify to the fact that in his recent speech Mr. Robins did significantly drop his familiar whitewashing of Lenin and Trotzky, his presentation of the Bolshevist Government as a Government representing the will and hopes of the majority of the Russian people, his advocating that that régime of Red terrorists be recognized and that economic and material aid be given them by the United States. Whether Mr. Robins's discreet silence indicated a "change of tone" or not would be a matter of personal opinion. It was evident that, addressing an audience which would not have been sympathetic with a defense of Lenin and Trotzky, he did not make his familiar pleading.

Now, as to Robins being "one of the main props of the radical movement," the fact is that Robins has probably been the favorite and most-quoted authority of Socialists, I. W. W.'s, parlor radicals, Bolshevist agents and sympathizers. As a defender of Soviet Russia, he has been exploited in The New Republic, The Liberator, and The New York Daily Call. What he has said of Lenin and Trotzky has been of greater effect than all that has been said by outright, honest Bolshevist agents, and his exoneration of that régime of the atrocities charged against it has had all the greater influence because of the fact that he prefaces his defense and wins confidence by asserting that he is opposed to the principles of Bolshevism and considers Bolshevism a menace to the world.

In his speech before the Republican County Committee Mr. Robins extolled America as the one nation which he believed could successfully meet the challenge of Bolshevism. In view of his silence concerning the atrocities which have been proved against the Bolshevist régime, and which he previously denied, and in view of the effect which he apparently sought to make upon a loyal Republican audience in a studiedly inoffensive and appealing speech, a few questions to Mr. Robins, as a member of the Advisory Committee on Platform of the Republican Party, would not at this time be inapropos.

Does Mr. Robins today still believe that there has been less terrorism, less destruction of life under Bolshevist rule in Russia than would have occurred during a revolution in America? Does he not credit the testimony of such men as Mr. Huntington, the Rev. Dr. Simons, John A. Embry, and Lieutenant A. W. Kliefoth?

Mr. Robins before the Senate committee admitted that he regarded "the Soviet program as economically impossible and morally wrong," that he regarded "the formulas, the challenge, of the Bolshevist program as the first challenge and menace to all political and democratic Governments of the world." Yet Mr. Robins, according to his own testimony, advocated that America recognize the Soviet Government and give to it economic and material support.

Does Mr. Robins, in view of all the evidence that has since come from Russia, still advocate recognition of a régime which is at open war with all constituted Governments? Does he still advocate that we give economic support to a régime which seeks to overthrow the Government of our own country? Does Mr. Robins advocate the lifting of the blockade?

Does Mr. Robins have no suspicion that the "nice things" he learned about the Bolsheviki through his interpreter, Alexander Gumberg (brother of Bolshevist Minister of Posts and Telegraphs Zorin), a Bolshevik; through Boris Reinstein, later secretary to Lenin, and a Bolshevik; through John Reed and Albert Rhys Williams, might have been colored for his benefit? Mr. Robins told the Senate committee of his lightning trips through Russia, of his going twice "all over Russia," of his talking to the peasants in their groups (although he admitted he did not know the Russian language), of his getting an "outdoor" point of view. Lieutenant A. W. Kliefoth, who was connected with the American Embassy and who left Russia only last September, has given certain missing details about Robins's amazing trips through Russia, telling how Lenin gave him a palatial private car formerly used by one of the Grand Dukes, how all traffic on the railroads was stopped by order of Lenin so that Robins might have free right of way. Does Mr. Robins still believe that he got more first-hand information, more accurate knowledge, facts of more extensive scope than any of the other witnesses who have come back from Russia, some of whom were in Russia before Mr. Robins's arrival and who remained there for a long period after he left?

Mr. Robins may, as all human beings are prone to do, have made mistakes; he may have got "colored" information regarding the Bolsheviki through his Bolshevist informers. Traveling in an imperial palace car, he may have seen, he may have heard, only what Lenin and Trotzky wished him to see and hear, and therefore, in his early testimony, while misinformed, he may have been quite sincere. Has he, perchance, since he appeared before the Overman committee, seen the light by reason of the additional information that has come from Russia? And would that account for "a change of tone" in his speech before the New York Republican County Committee? If so, does it not behoove Mr. Robins, in a straightforward, manly way, to come forth and admit that, duped, deluded, "captured" by the Bolsheviki, he was "used," in fact was actually used as "one of the main props of the radical movement"? As a whitewasher of Lenin and Trotzky, as a man whose word as given before the Overman committee still stands unrepudiated, one cannot but agree with the writer of the letter to THE NEW YORK TIMES that his presence on the Republican Advisory Committee on Platform "can only result in alienating honest and loyal Republicans without getting others in their place."

URGES AMERICANIZING BILL.

Kenyon Favors Education to Replace Repressive Measures.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The Senate today began discussion of the Kenyon Americanization bill, which is designed to combat the menace of Bolshevism in this country by educational means instead of through repressive measures.

The bill would enlist the co-operation of the States with the Federal Government in making Americans of those who come to this country, by teaching them English and at the same time giving them a thorough knowledge of the soul and purpose of America.

Mr. Kenyon, in opening discussion, pointed out that the Government was about to spend a billion and a half dollars for an Army and a Navy, and said in his opinion the $12,500,000 asked was little enough to spend in making Americans. He went on:

"According to our last census we had 5,500,000 illiterates and 3,000,000 non-English-speaking persons, a total of 8,500,000 people, or the equivalent of the population of eighteen States."

"It seems to me," Senator Norris interrupted, "that we should separate the two classes covered in this bill, and that the Federal Government should undertake only that which contemplates the teaching of the English language to our foreign-born population. Elimination of illiteracy in our native-born population is essentially a function for the various States to undertake.

"Speaking or writing the English language does not make Americans," Senator Kenyon replied. "It merely is a step to get people to thinking primarily in terms of Americanism; it is laying the foundation to instill into them the fundamental principles of the soul of Americanism."

Senator Kenyon said he favored deportation of "Reds," but that he did not believe that offered a cure for the evil.

"You may deport all the Goldmans and Berkmans and all the others you can find," he said, "but you do not get at the real cure. I favor meeting their radical ideas, their syndicalism, their Bolshevism, with education."

APPEAL FOR QUAKE VICTIMS.

Americans in Mexico Ask Help from Home—Red Cross to Act.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 16.—The American Chamber of Commerce of Mexico has directed an appeal to the American people, through The Associated Press, for the immediate relief of victims of the recent earthquake and volcanic eruptions in the States of Vera Cruz and Puebla.

"So great is the suffering of the survivors," says the appeal, "and so urgent is their need that the American Chamber of Commerce has organized a relief committee, with George T. Summerlin, Chargé at the American Embassy in Mexico City, as honorary Chairman, to collect money for medicines, blankets and clothing for direct distribution to the needy. The calamity is unprecedented in the history of Mexico. Entire villages have disappeared and numberless lives have been lost, and the Chamber now appeals to the people of the United States to join their fellow-Americans here in the work of relief for sick, hungry and homeless thousands who must be helped. The need is great, and present relief measures are wholly inadequate to meet it. This is an opportunity to help Mexico in a practical way and serve humanity.

"The Chamber asks the American people, especially the banks, manufacturers, exporters and importers of the United States, to contribute promptly, sending their remittances by mail or cable to the Chamber, the address of which is Mexico City."

The American Red Cross will at once extend relief, as far as may be practicable, in connection with the earthquake in Mexico that has spread death and suffering over a large territory; it was announced at local headquarters of the Red Cross last night. The extent and form of relief and the method of co-operation with the Mexican Red Cross will depend upon the result of an inquiry that is now under way.

The League of Red Cross Societies has cabled from Geneva that it would gratefully welcome action by the American Red Cross on its behalf in favor of the sufferers. The Mexican Government has also promised co-operation with the Red Cross.

RAREDUERER PRINTS IN ART MUSEUM

RANK WITH WORLD'S BEST

Two Magnificent Flemish Tapestries of 16th Century, a Bequest of Mrs. A. D. Juilliard, on View.

Announcement was made by the Metropolitan Museum of Art yesterday of its acquisition of a remarkable collection of Dürer prints, the Junius Spencer Morgan collection, so remarkable a collection that the Museum can now cross Dürer's name off its print list as a complete thing which cannot be improved upon, something which is almost unprecedented in the history of museums.

Mr. Morgan is a nephew of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, former President of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and cousin of the present J. P. Morgan, Mr. Morgan was a collector among collectors, William M. Ivins, Curator of the Print Department of the Museum, said yesterday, working with the greatest patience during thirty years to obtain the finest impressions of the Dürer work extant and overcoming obstacles when he had discovered a print which he wished to add to his collection in a way that, as Mr. Ivins expressed it, was "downright daring." In addition to the Dürers he collected himself Mr. Morgan drew upon two other collections which he obtained en bloc—those of Theodore Irwin and the late George W. Vanderbilt. Mr. Vanderbilt had himself been an assiduous collector, searching all over the world, spending much of his time abroad, and with collectors on the outlook for him.

Theodore Irwin had been the first of the three collectors, each of whom had formed magnificent collections. Mr. Morgan's collection, when he had taken the rarest and best prints from the two collections after they came into his hands, produced this superexcellent collection which is now in the Museum's possession. The Museum authorities learned in the Spring that it would be possible for them to obtain the collection, and they lost no time in doing so.

They will, when the collection is placed on public exhibition, which will not be until next month, have placed certain of the Dürers "on the map" in this country, according to Mr. Ivins. Some of them have been so rare that they were not known in the United States. "I believe Dürer's St. Jerome' has been shown in the Boston Museum," said Mr. Ivins, "and I have an impression that the 'Holy Family' is somewhere in this country, but prints which we shall now show with this collection people have not known, because they have not been in existence in the United States."

There are four museums or libraries abroad where there are Dürer collections comparable to the one now in the possession of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and of the five in the world with which it now ranks the Metropolitan will not stand lowest with its Dürer collection. The others having collections are the British Museum, the Albertina Library at Vienna, the famous Paris Bibliothèque Nationale and the New Museum at Berlin. There is a collection in Copenhagen—one which was presented by Dürer—which has a special value from this fact.

"Our prints (the Dürers) are first states that most people have never seen," said Mr. Ivins, "and they have pedigrees like race horses." The print department of the Metropolitan Museum of Art is only three years old, and in that short time it has reached a remarkable state of excellence which places it as a whole in a first rank among print departments.

Placed on exhibition in the Recent Accessions Room of the Museum yesterday, to remain there for the remainder of the month, until they are permanently hung, are two magnificent examples of Flemish (Brussels) tapestries of the sixteenth century, a bequest of Mrs. Augustus D. Juilliard, who died in 1916, given then subject to a life interest by her husband, Mr. Juilliard, who died last Spring, and the tapestries have now come to the Museum. They are 19 by 14 feet, belong to a set of twelve, each representing a month, the two at the Museum being respectively October and August. They were formerly in the Séchan collection with two others of the set, July and September. It is supposed that they were woven at Brussels about 1525 from the cartoons of Bernard van Orley, the master of the Brussels School of the Renaissance period. They are beautiful in color as well as in design, fine in quality and beautifully and skillfully woven. In each is a large circle with the signs of the zodiac, these arranged so that the sign which stands for the month of that particular tapestry is at the top where the name is given.

Loans of great interest which have been placed on exhibit in the Department of the Far East are Japanese screens by the great painter Korin, of a quality not found outside Japan and only in the most private collections, where no outsider can see them in Nippon. The technique and color of these are wonderful, and already New York artists have discovered them and are visiting the Museum to study the very modern conceptions of this seventeenth century artist. They are loaned by Sumner Welles and will remain on exhibition for some time.

Not so long will be shown the collection of dignified Chinese officials and great men and some women, which are shown in Room H 11, dignitaries of long ago, the greater number of them of the Ming Period. These are portraits which were usually painted after death, hung on the wall above the catafalque at the time of the funeral, and hung in ancestral halls and venerated at New Year's and on anniversaries.

The many visitors to the collection of Egyptian jewelry in the Recent Accessions Room will be glad to learn that it is to remain there for another month.

MACAULEY RECEIVES VERDICT OF $100,000

TWO ACTIONS YET UNTRIED

The jury before Supreme Court Justice Tierney which has been hearing the $500,000 suit of Alexander P. Macauley, a Toronto mining broker, against Theodore B. Starr, Incorporated, jewelers, because he was arrested in January, 1917, on the ground that he was the notorious forger "Christmas Keough" and had passed fraudulent travelers' checks on the jewelry store, returned a verdict yesterday for $100,000. The verdict is the largest ever reached here in an action for malicious prosecution or in any case of like nature.

The jury reached the conclusion that the mining broker had been damaged in the large sum allowed because he testified that it cost him $50,000 to clear his name, and he had to sell valuable stocks to raise the money. He also testified that in 1915 his income from his mining promotions was $60,000 and in 1916 it was about $70,000. He said his business was practically ruined after his arrest. Two other actions for $250,000 each against Brooks Brothers and Lambert Brothers remain to be tried.

Macauley was arrested in St. Louis after fraudulent checks had been passed on the May Department Store and the Stix-Baer-Fuller Company. He had gone there to spend the holidays with his family, and was apprehended by city and private detectives on the ground of his resemblance to the known description of Keough. Later, when it was learned that he had been in New York during the few days before Christmas, when the bad checks were passed here, he was indicted here on the testimony of clerks in the Starr store that the bogus check, made out fifteen years before, resembled the forger, and the St. Louis authorities contended that Macauley and Keough were one.

While Macauley was preparing to defend himself and had furnished proof that he was on a train from Detroit to St. Louis when the Starr checks were passed and was in his hotel all day when the St. Louis stores were swindled, the trail of the real Christmas Keough became visible again and he was arrested in Chicago for defrauding stores there and convicted and sentenced to Joliet. Macauley then sued all the stores which joined in his prosecution. The St. Louis cases were continued and when the detective sergeant who arrested him, who is now chief of detectives in St. Louis, testified there that the stores had nothing to do with the prosecution, but that he had acted on his own initiative, a verdict for the stores was directed. Macauley is now appealing on the ground that he opposed the consolidation of the suits.

Macauley testified before Justice Tierney and the jury that his arrest was unjustified because Keough did not resemble him in the least. He testified that before the real swindler had been convicted and his jewelry and money which were the proceeds of his forgeries found in a Fifth Avenue safe deposit vault, he located an insurance man in Canada whom he thought might be the swindler and who resembled the description of Keough, even to a mole on the back of his neck.

No defense was offered by Martin W. Littleton, who appeared as trial counsel for the Starr Company, on the ground that the witnesses for the plaintiff who told the circumstances under which Macauley was indicted were also the defendant's witnesses. Mr. Littleton contended that the action by the store in reporting the loss through the forged check and in responding to the call of the authorities to institute the criminal proceedings was only such as society demanded in such a case.

DR. GRANT'S CASE DELAYED.

Bishop Burch Silent on Report of Ascension Church Vestry.

Bishop Charles Sumner Burch said yesterday he would make no statement at present regarding the report of the vestry of the Church of the Ascension on the controversy over the utterances of the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant on the deportation of anarchists. The Rev. G. A. Carstensen, who announced that formal charges of violation of church canons would be preferred against Dr. Grant, said yesterday that this action would be delayed until after Bishop Burch had made his disposition of the incident.

Dr. Grant is suffering from severe illness, it was reported yesterday at his residence. He had a heavy cold, which was said to have caused an infection of the nose.

POST RECRUIT 99 YEARS OLD

Veteran Was General Scott's Bodyguard in Mexican War.

Argonne Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Brooklyn, yesterday acquired its oldest recruit in Emanuel Oppenheimer, 99 years old, veteran of the Mexican war. He was the personal bodyguard of General Winfield Scott when the Americans entered Mexico City in 1847.

Mr. Oppenheimer, who lives at 485 East 140th Street, the Bronx, was unable to attend the meeting of the post last evening for his formal enrollment because of illness, so he was mustered in in bed.

Mr. Oppenheimer came to this city from Germany in the early 40's. He was working as a shagmaker at the beginning of the Mexican war. He had been a member of the State Militia, and enlisted in the old Tenth Infantry, a regular regiment, serving all through the conflict.

COPELAND PREDICTS INFLUENZA RETURN

Health Chief Says Disease Is Not Epidemic Here and May Not Become So.

Health Commissioner Dr. Royal S. Copeland, commenting on the increase in influenza cases reported in New York yesterday, predicted there would be a recurrence of the disease which swept the country more than a year ago, and which is moving eastward from Chicago. This year's visitation would be less serious than last year's, he said, and those who had the disease then would probably be immune this time. Statistics of the Health Department showed there were 291 new cases of influenza this week, as against 97 in the preceding week, and an increase of 38 cases yesterday over Thursday.

In reviewing health conditions for the last few months, Dr. Copeland gave these figures, showing by weeks the new cases of influenza and pneumonia: For the week ended Dec. 6, 58 cases of influenza and 199 of pneumonia; Dec. 13, 48 influenza, 201 pneumonia; Dec. 20, 55 influenza, 285 pneumonia; Dec. 27, 73 influenza, 300 pneumonia; Jan. 3, 27 influenza, 284 pneumonia; Jan. 10, 97 influenza, 532 pneumonia, and Jan. 16, 291 influenza, and 617 pneumonia.

| | Influenza. Cases. | Deaths. | Pneumonia. Cases. | Deaths. |
| Monday | 17 | 2 | 110 | 30 |
| Tuesday | 47 | 1 | 132 | 55 |
| Wednesday | 43 | 2 | 114 | 43 |
| Thursday | 20 | 2 | 101 | 44 |
| Friday | 77 | 2 | 146 | 35 |

Keep away from coughers; keep out of crowds; don't use dishes or towels used by others; keep in the fresh air and sunlight; sleep in well ventilated rooms; be temperate in eating; if you feel sick go to bed and get a doctor; catch every sneeze in your handkerchief; walk instead of riding in the cars; keep your mouth away from telephone receivers; wash often.

528 NEW CASES IN CHICAGO.

Influenza Spreading Rapidly There —Health Service Not Alarmed.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Five hundred and twenty-five new cases of influenza, with seven deaths, were reported as developments of the twenty-four hours ending at 10 A. M. today. The number is nearly twice that reported yesterday, when 280 new cases were reported. Ninety-three new pneumonia cases, with twelve deaths, were reported.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. — The outbreak of influenza in Chicago should not be the occasion of any alarm, the Public Health Service said tonight in announcing that steps had been taken to localize the epidemic. The malady ran its course a year ago and left millions immune; movement of large bodies of troops has ceased, and doctors and nurses have returned to civilian work in numbers equal to any ordinary emergency.

TO HEAR LABOR ON SEDITION

House Committee Will Review Graham Measure.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The American Federation of Labor has made a protest against the Graham Sedition bill, which the House substituted yesterday for the bill passed by the Senate and introduced there by Senator Sterling of South Dakota.

In view of the protests Chairman Campbell of the Rules Committee announced today that his committee yesterday refused to order a special rule taking the Graham bill to the floor.

The hearings on the bill will now be reopened, and the representatives of the A. F. of L. will appear next Thursday before the House Judiciary Committee.

Great objection is being made by labor officials to the more drastic features of the Graham bill. The Graham bill is based upon a bill prepared by the Attorney General. Some of its sections provide the death penalty for agitations against the Government which result in loss of life.

SAYS WOMAN IS A CHATTEL.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Is it a basis for a husband's claim for divorce damages that his wife is still in fact if not in law a chattel of his? This was the theme of an interesting argument before Mr. Justice McCardie in the Divorce Court yesterday, arising out of a case in which damages were sought against the co-respondent by the husband. Counsel for the petitioner said that up to the Matrimonial Causes act of 1857, a woman was regarded as a chatel and the jury had to award damages according to her value to her husband. His Lordship then asked when had a wife ceased to be regarded as a chattel. Counsel for the petitioner said he had not suggested that this idea had gone.

Judge—"You say she is still to be regarded as a chattel?"

Counsel—"Yes, with slight modifications. The question in assessing damages is, What is she worth?"

Judge—"Then you call her quasi chattel?"

After some further discussion, Justice McCardie asked if as the result of counsel's researches he could show that a wife could bring action against the seducer of her husband.

Counsel said there was no such case and that there could not be such an action because a woman had not the same legal status or the same legal rights as a man.

STATE TAX RETURNS LAG.

Controller Reports 2,000 Received Out of an Estimated 750,000.

Returns on the State income tax are coming in very slowly, Controller Travis reported yesterday, adding that it was not the duty of his office to send out blanks to taxpayers, and that those who did not file returns before March 15 would be liable to penalties.

Only 2,000 returns have been received, the Controller said, out of 750,000 expected. Two forms have been prepared, one covering income from salaries and the other income from business or professions. A district office has been established at 120 Broadway.

Order Socialist Assemblyman Out.

Charles Solomon, one of the suspended Socialist Assemblymen, has been notified to vacate his apartment at 601 Howard Avenue, Brooklyn, before Feb. 1. Mrs. Solomon said the trouble started several months ago, when Solomon led a fight to get leases for the tenants, which were obtained, but during the dispute the Solomons tore up theirs. Recently Assemblyman Solomon had trouble with the janitress and the owner ordered him to vacate. The case will come up in the Municipal Court.

Mrs. Scheff Sues for Separation.

Mrs. Minnie Scheff, a playwright under the name of Marjorie Blaine brought suit in the Supreme Court yesterday for a separation from Jonas S. Scheff, a silk merchant. They were married in 1902.

TWO MORE ARE DEAD FROM EATING OLIVES

SUSPECTED FOOD SEIZED

Health Department Warns Against "Large Ripe Olives"—First Aid to Patients.

Paul Delbene and Anthony Delbene, his 13-year-old son, of 2,328 Hughes Avenue, the Bronx, died in Fordham Hospital yesterday from eating olives. Mrs. Delbene died from the same cause on Jan. 10 and her son Dominick on Jan. 14. Concetta Delbene, the only survivor of the family, is in Fordham Hospital ill, but she is expected to recover.

Dominick Delbene, a brother of Paul Delbene, was taken to Fordham Hospital seriously ill yesterday. He went from his home at 105 Fourth Avenue to give what information he could regarding the malady that had killed his brother's family, when he too was stricken.

Dr. Louis Ferrara, who attended the family, heard yesterday that there was a serum to counteract the effects of the poison, kept at the University of Illinois. He wired, asking that some of it be sent here as soon as possible.

Health Department officials yesterday went to a grocery in Twelfth Street near Second Avenue where the Delbenes had bought their food and seized all of the olives of the brand which they had eaten. The eight olives, all that remained in the bottle on the Delbene kitchen shelf, were sent to the Health Department laboratory and to the United States Bureau of Chemistry. The Health officials will await the report of the chemists.

There is very little the Health Department can do, Dr. Copeland said. The bacillus botulinus, supposed to have caused the deaths, is of uncertain origin and is found in canned fruits, canned meats, pickled meats and sausages. It is not the result of improper packing, Dr. Copeland said, but exists in the fruit and is put in the container and does not develop there after being put up. For this reason, he said, the bottle purchased by the Delbenes might have been the only one infected in the whole consignment.

When some months ago a number of persons were poisoned in Detroit the health authorities blamed the outbreak on olives of the brand that caused the trouble there, and made a careful inspection of the goods in stock here. Not a single bacillus was found. This will probably be found to be true this time, Dr. Copeland thought.

The Health Department now has 71 bottles of olives of the brand that caused death, all the dealer had in stock. The name of the grower in California is known as well as the distributor here. It will take some time, it was said yesterday, for the authorities to obtain information as to conditions under which the particular brand of olives is ripened, treated, and packed.

In every case of olive poisoning that has come to the attention of the department the medium has been what is known as giant ripe olives. Heat is sure death to the bacilli, and it is the theory advanced by Dr. Copeland that in the case of the giant olive the heat did not penetrate to the centre and so the bacilli survived. Just at present, he said, "avoid large olives." Sausage, meats and canned goods that have been thoroughly cooked are rendered harmless, he said.

The Health Commissioner advises, in suspected cases, that a physician be called, the stomach of the patient be emptied by using warm salt water or warm mustard water, a tablespoonful of mustard to a cupful. The bowels should be evacuated by a brisk purge and the patient should be put to bed and kept warm.

MOTHER PLEADS FOR SON.

Mrs. Hansen, Recognizing Judge as Doctor at Boy's Birth, Collapses.

When Charles Hansen, a youth of 18, was arraigned with two others yesterday before United States Commissioner James H. McCabe in Brooklyn, charged with breaking into the Government reservation at Fort Hamilton and stealing six fire extinguishers, his mother recognized the Judge in her son's case as the physician who attended her at the boy's birth.

"I never thought this would happen," said Mrs. Hansen, as she collapsed weeping.

The Commissioner, who was a practicing physician when Hansen was born, later studied law and was elected to the State Senate. The three boys were held by him in $4,000 bail each for examination.

Stole Silver from Synagogue.

Joseph Schwartz, of 3,806 Third Avenue, Interborough Rapid Transit Company conductor, pleaded guilty yesterday before Magistrate John E. McGeehan in Morrisania Court, to a charge of larceny in stealing silverware worth $175, and four prayer shawls valued at $75, from the Synagogue Hebrew Zion Institute, 1,342 Stebbens Avenue, the Bronx. He will be held for the Grand Jury. Samuel Goldstein, attorney for Schwartz, informed the court that Schwartz had pleaded guilty Thursday to stealing shawls from a synagogue in Hughes Avenue.

BROOKLYN RECLUSE DEAD.

Samuel E. Haslett, Whose Wife Met Tragic Death, Was 84.

Samuel E. Haslett, Brooklyn's aged and wealthy recluse, died yesterday at his home, 138 Remsen Street, at the age of 84 years. The tragic death of his wife in 1891 is believed to have been the direct cause of his seclusion for more than twenty years, during which time he lived alone in the house at 138 Remsen Street. Mr. Haslett was the last member of a family that was once one of the best known and most fashionable in Brooklyn. His father was Dr. John Haslett, the first of the family to settle in Brooklyn. The old Haslett mansion, at Clinton and Joralemon Streets, in later years known as the house of mystery, was the scene of some of the most important events in the social life of the city.

When the mansion was suddenly closed—just why or when has never been made known, but it was long before 1891, when Samuel Haslett's wife was tragically burned to death. It was in that year that he married Miss Elizabeth M. Hughes, daughter of Dr. Southmayd Thorne. In June of the same year, while she was revarnishing some old furniture in the servants' quarters on the top floor of the Remsen Street house, the liquid exploded, setting fire to her clothing. She was seen by neighbors suddenly throwing herself out of the window and landing on the extension roof below, a mass of flames. Mr. Haslett was not at home, but he arrived shortly before she died.

From that time on Mr. Haslett began a life of seclusion that remained unbroken until 1912, when he was found ill and destitute. Alienists who examined him declared him incompetent, and a committee of his estate and person was appointed. It was only last year that the house of mystery was razed. So far as is known only cousins survive the aged recluse.

DR. ISAAC SHARPLESS DIES.

President of Haverford College for 29 Years Was 72.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 16.—Dr. Isaac Sharpless, President of Haverford College from 1887 to 1916, his incumbency marking a great growth in the institution, died tonight at his home in Haverford. Dr. Sharpless held high rank among American educators and college executives. When he came to Haverford the college was composed of only six buildings; when he left there were twenty. The endowment was multiplied ten times.

Treveylan and Channing acknowledged Dr. Sharpless as the leading authority on Pennsylvania history. He wrote in addition to historical works several standard text books on mathematics. He was born in Chester County in 1848, was graduated from Lawrence Scientific School in 1873, and came first to Haverford as an instructor in mathematics, advancing to professor and then dean. His experiences as an educator are summed up in his last book, "The American College."

General Monroe also captured the Metropolitan Handicap, the Fordham Stakes, and the Chicago Cup, and at the close of the season Mr. McElmeel refused James R. Keene's offer of $32,500 for him. Bad luck followed. The next year, 1885, the horse broke his shoulder and was shot. Then came a series of financial reverses that cost the owner all he had. For the last ten years he had worked as night watchman at the car barns of the Yonkers City Railroad.

REGINALD DE KOVEN DIES AT A DANCE

WAS GRADUATE OF OXFORD

Author of "Robin Hood" and "Rob Roy" Was a Prolific Writer of Light Operas, and Conductor.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Reginald de Koven, the composer of "Robin Hood" and other operas, died of apoplexy at a supper dance here early today. He expired while guests at the home of Mrs. Joseph Fish on South Shore Drive were hailing the success of his recently produced grand opera, "Rip Van Winkle."

Mr. de Koven took a merry part in the festivities, and none noticed that he was indisposed. After a dance he seated himself and chatted about his work. The music started again, but he did not respond. Instead he leaned back on the couch on which he was sitting. One of the party tapped him on the shoulder, bidding him dance, but he gave no sign.

Dr. Ludwig Simon, a member of the party, hurried to his side, made a hasty examination and told the party that its guest was unconscious from apoplexy.

"He was dead within ten minutes after the stroke," said Dr. Simon.

Reginald de Koven was born in Middletown, Conn., in 1861, the son of an Episcopalian clergyman who was descended from an English Army Captain of Colonial times. His father took up his residence in England in 1872 and sent his son to Oxford. A year after his graduation young de Koven gained his first fame with the words and music of "Marjorie Daw," to be followed by three hundred other songs in later years.

His musical education was gained in several Continental schools, notably Stuttgart, Vienna and Paris. On his return to this country he began the composition of light operas, and in 1890 every one was whistling and singing the airs of the greatest of all his successes, "Robin Hood" produced by the famous Bostonians. It is pleasant now to recall "The Tinkers Chorus," "Brown October Ale," the song of the Sheriff of Nottingham, "Maid Marian's tuneful melodies, "The Armorer's Song" and "The Tale of a Tailor," but probably the most widely acclaimed of all was "Oh, Promise Me," a number interpolated in the opera to give Jessie Bartlett Davis more opportunity.

"Robin Hood" had followed two other light operas of his, "The Begum," given by the McCall Opera Company in 1887, and "Don Quixote," by the Bostonians, in 1889. How prolific was this American composer may be seen by glancing at this list of other operettas and musical comedies that came in quick succession, nearly all of them cordially received by the public: "The Fencing Master," "Rob Roy," "Taigane," "The Red Feather," "The Highwayman," "Foxy Quiller," "Golden Butterfly," "Beauty Spot," "The Three Dragoons," "Papa's Wife," "Man in the Moon," "Broadway to Tokio," "Happyland," "The Snowman," "Little Duchess," "The Knickerbockers."

At the period the phrase "De Koven and Smith" was the usual answer to the question as to who were the authors of the reigning comic opera success. The Smith, of course, being Harry B. Smith. Most of the scores contained a liberal number of tuneful pieces.

Mr. De Koven was the founder and conductor of the Washington Symphony Orchestra, and in still other directions employed his musical talents, serving at various times as musical critic or editor of the Chicago Evening Post, 1889-1890, the New York World from 1891 to 1897, Journal 1898 to 1900, and The World again from 1907 to 1912, and as late as 1918 he contributed signed articles on notable musical events to The Herald.

Mr. De Koven once said that he became a composer because he "couldn't help it," and when asked what was the secret of his musical inspiration, he gave this answer:

"Why, anything in motion, like a railroad train, or a cab, or a horse, or a cable car, or an automobile, or a golf ball, or a pack of cards, provided there is rhythm in the motion, is enough to start tuneful ideas in my head."

"Rip Van Winkle," was not the only De Koven grand opera, for in March, 1917, the Metropolitan Opera Company produced his "Canterbury Pilgrims," for which the words were written by Percy MacKaye. In this connection one may recall that in 1911 Mr. De Koven had severely arraigned the policy of Director Gatti-Casazza, asserting that the Metropolitan management was excluding American composers from a deserved hearing, and that the organization needed an American head.

Mr. De Koven was married in 1884 to Miss Anna Farwell of Chicago, a daughter of Senator Charles Benjamin Farwell, and a sister of Mrs. Hobart Chatfield Chatfield-Taylor and Mrs. Robert McGann. She is the author of a "Life of John Paul Jones," which stands high among American biographies. Their residence in New York was at 1025 Park Avenue. Mr. De Koven belonged to the Knickerbocker, Union and Brook Clubs.

STYLE

We can state the substance of Skolny Clothes — describe the fabrics in exact terms—but the Style that inheres in them baffles our descriptive power. Yes, we can say a great deal about the Style, but not much that is definite or satisfactory.

The Style speaks out the thoughts that are in the Clothes. This statement is vague, not scientific. Everybody acknowledges the value of Style, but there is no way to explain what it is.

Hard To Advertise Style

Advertising, as a rule, deals with concrete things, but Style is an abstraction—as elusive as a thistle-down.

At best, it is a suggestional quality, but it individualizes Clothes — makes them vividly different from garments that come over the beaten path.

Skolny Clothes are marked with that element — the element of variation. They differ from ordinary Clothes. They differ from extraordinary Clothes. They create a distinct style-standard — the Skolny standard — clearly expressed in line and curve, in slant and drape, in tone and fit, in tailoring and finish yet defying language.

Style Needs No Copyright

While we can't find words with which to interpret the Style of Skolny Clothes, you sense it at sight.

That other makers use our models for inspirations, we regard as a compliment. But in copying them, they miss that vital something, which, for the lack of a better word, we call "Style."

McDONALD BEST WITH SHOT

Mike A. Devaney, the Millrose A. A. runner, who holds the national two-mile steeplechase title, last night showed his heels to a field of nine rivals in the Metropolitan A. A. U. 1,000-yard championship race, one of the feature events of the indoor games of the 71st Regiment. The fleet-footed Millrose star, his long legs carrying him over the board floor with a speed which left his rivals in the ruck, raced to the title in 2:22 1-5, winning by a margin of eight yards from Jack Sellers of the New York A. C., the national 600-yard champion. Sellers, in turn, was pressed to his utmost to take second in the face of the determined bid for the place made by Harry Wigger of the Paulist A. C., who raced at the Mercury Footers' elbow throughout the last lap.

The race provided the principal competition of a lengthy and attractive program. A crowd of about 3,000 witnessed the events, giving particular attention to the 1,000-yard title run and Devaney's victory. As he crossed the finish line Devaney was given a rousing ovation, which resounded throughout the East Thirty-fourth Street Armory.

A field of ten middle-distancers started in quest of the title. From the outset Devaney and Sellers were the principal contenders. With the bark of the gun in Starter Johnny McHugh's hand Devaney was off like a streak into the leading position, followed by Sellers and E. Ballestier of the Knights of St. Antony. Straggling thereafter came the remainder of the field with George Buttner, of the Jersey Harriers' A. A. at the head of the trailers.

Browser Takes Lead.

On the second lap Devaney was still in front, racing along well in command of himself and at a fast pace, with Sellers following closely behind. Herman Browser increased his pace and moved into third position, displacing Ballestier. The lattered recovered on the next round of the track, and, with a burst of speed which brought the spectators to their feet, went to the head of the field. Devaney held to second position, while Browser increased his pace and moved into third place, ahead of Sellers. There was no change in the order of the race on the following lap, although the pace seemed to tell on Ballestier and he showed signs of weakening. Just before entering the fifth lap, however, Devaney made his bid for victory, and, with Sellers following, went to the front.

As the bell sounded for the last lap, Devaney increased his pace for the final third around the track. Sellers, sensing the emergency, also put on steam, while Harry Wigger shot out like a streak from sixth position to reach even terms with Sellers, about a yard back of the flying Devaney.

The Millrose A. A. star, covering ground like a greyhound, sped over the boards, gaining ground on Sellers and Wigger at each stride. At the finish line Devaney had opened up a gap of about eight yards, while Sellers was battling for all he was worth to retain second position. The Mercury Foot wearer was successful in his struggle for the place, but by the narrowest of margins.

McDonald Retains Title.

Patrick J. McDonald, the mountainous traffic policeman who directs bewildered pedestrians at Broadway and Forty-third Street, successfully defended his title of Metropolitan A. A. U. 16-pound shotput champion in another titular event. The mighty New York A. C. "whale" heaved the ball 43 feet 10 inches, leading H. Elsey of the Mohawk A. C. by ten feet ¾ inch. S. Harrison Thomson of Princeton, national all-round champion, finished third, and Harry Correll of the Pastime A. C. was fourth.

Willie Plant of the Morningside A. C., national champion walker, added the Metropolitan A. A. U. one-mile title to his collection when he walked away from a field of seven rivals, winning in 6:46, the fastest indoor mile recorded in this district in several years. Plant won impressively, leading by almost half a lap. Win J. Rolker of the New York A. C., who finished second. Joseph B. Pearman, another Mercury Footer, finished third, about twenty yards back of Rolker.

Plant went to the head of the field with the first lap, going away at a surprising pace, which found Dick Remer, unattached, unprepared and in seventh position as the walkers went round the first turn. Rolker went away stride for stride with Plant, but the pace soon told on the New York A. C. ped, and at the fifth lap the national champion was leading by about twenty yards. Plant gradually increased this margin as the race progressed, and Rolker weakened.

McLEAN SAILS FOR NORWAY.

Skater Says He Is in Good Condition to Meet Mathieson.

Bobby McLean, champion professional speed skater, sailed yesterday for Christiania, Norway, on the Stavangerfjord of the Norwegian-American Line. The ice skating titleholder is expected to arrive in Norway Jan. 26. The first of his international skating races with Oscar Mathieson will be held Feb. 7 at Christiania and on the following day the races will be continued. Before boarding the Stavangerfjord McLean declared himself in perfect condition and confident of the outcome of his races abroad. The champion closed his preparation for the trip on the lake in Central Park.

Elaborate preparations have been made whereby McLean will be enabled to keep himself in condition during the long trip to Norway. In the absence of skating facilities McLean will be provided with other athletic apparatus during the voyage. The champion, if his schedule materializes, will have from Jan 26 to Feb. 7 to prepare himself in Norway for the races against Mathieson and with this training period available McLean is confident he can repeat his successes of three years ago when he raced against Mathieson in this country.

TYRO WINS ICEBOAT RACE.

REDBANK, N. J., Jan. 16.—In a hard northeast wind that at times blew a gale and in snow squalls that almost blinded the skippers as they drove their white winged fliers over the north Shrewsbury Club course, six third-class ice yachts were sent away in a fifteen-mile race for the W. Harold Powers cup this afternoon. Only two of the yachts finished, Grant and Morford's Tyro being the winner and the only craft that came through without an accident. Bear Brand, was the tiderman and Harry Boskey was sheet tender of the Tyro. George W. Bray's Daisy, handled by D. F. Fisher, finished second, limping home with a broken peakblock.

WESTERN GOLFERS TO MEET

Will Elect Officers and Award Title Tournaments Tonight.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—The group of Western golfers who pay only occasional interest to the U. S. G. A. will have their own annual conclave tomorrow night here at the annual meeting of the Western Golf Association in the Congress Hotel. All the championship tournaments will be assigned.

Significance is seen in the list of officers nominated. Evidently the Western body is branching out, for among the directors to be voted in tomorrow are two men who are sectional presidents. James Nugent, of Kansas City, is head of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association, a group of clubs which holds one of the most important championship tournaments in the Middle West, and Edward B. Tufts, President of the Southern California Association. Few golfers interpret the movement as a continuation of the disagreement with the U. S. G. A., which were apparent in 1916 over the amateur question, but it is regarded on the whole as a plan to administer golfing affairs much the same as the Amateur Athletic Union directs track athletics. With an executive in each section it has been argued there would result better representation of the clubs and a higher development of competition.

ADOPT 168-GAME SCHEDULE

American Association to Begin Season April 14.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Club owners of the American Association, after wrangling all day over the details of the schedule for 1920, decided tonight to play 168 games, opening the season April 14 and closing Oct. 3, but because none of the tentative schedules presented for consideration was satisfactory a committee was appointed to draft a new one, which will be presented for adoption tomorrow.

John Savage of the Kansas City Club was appointed Chairman of the Schedule Committee. Mike Kelley, manager of the St. Paul Club; William Neal of the Louisville Club, and W. P. Weeks, Secretary of the Toledo Club, were appointed to serve with him.

The decision to play 168 games instead of 154 was a reversal of expectations. President Hickey was strongly in favor of the shorter season, but the majority voted in favor of the extra two weeks of play. In deciding to play a 168-game program, the club owners voted to restore the game to a prewar basis.

President Hickey said the league had taken no action in regard to a salary limit, and hinted all restrictions in this regard would be cast aside, although the club owners might decide to adopt a salary limit tomorrow. The salary limit last season was $4,500 a month for sixteen players, exclusive of a manager, but the player limit for the 1920 season will be eighteen, exclusive of a manager.

HIGH SCHOOLS IN MEET.

Compete for Indoor Track Championship in Brooklyn Tonight.

Athletes of eighteen high schools in the local district will compete this evening for the city indoor track and field championship in the seventeenth annual titular meet, which will be held under the auspices of the Public Schools Athletic League at the 23d Regiment Armory, Brooklyn. A large entry has been received for the eighteen events to be contested, and spirited competition among the schoolboys is expected.

Competition for the city championship trophy, which goes to the school whose representatives score the greatest number of points, is expected to be exceptionally keen. De Witt Clinton High School's athletes have been training hard to retain the trophy which they won last year. The other teams of the high school "Big Six," Commerce, Stuyvesant, Manual Training, Erasmus Hall, and Morris, have nominated formidable teams.

BARNHILL DEFEATS BROWN.

Wins Golf Championship of Advertising League at Pinehurst.

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 16.—The championship of the Winter Golf League of Advertising Interests has passed into the keeping of Roy Barnhill of Fox Hills. Barnhill and T. Russell Brown of Scarsdale, winner of the Qualifying Medal, met in the final of the tournament at Pinehurst today, and the Fox Hills expert won by 5 up and 3 to play.

He led by 1 up at the turn, after winning the ninth with a 3, and took five of the next six holes, which brought the match to an end at the fifteenth. He registered a fine birdie on the thirteenth, and took most of the others in par, playing in a fairly heavy rain. Brown lost the fifteenth and the match by driving into the woods and overplaying the green on his recovery.

TAILOR MAID WINS OVER MUDDY TRACK

Leads Field of Three in the Madonna Handicap at New Orleans Fair Grounds.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 16.—Just when it seemed that there would be a return to favorable racing conditions, the weather upset calculations at the Fair Grounds again today. The several days of sunshine were suddenly punctuated by rain and the track, which had practically dried out and promised to be fairly fast for the day's sport, was again turned into a sea of mud. The change in the weather had some effect on the attendance, but it did not have much effect on form, as four of the seven favorites came home in front and gave the players a fairly good day.

Owing to the change in the track conditions the field for the feature event, the Madonna Handicap, at a mile for fillies and mares, was reduced to three starters, two of those originally named being scratched. Tailor Maid, running in the colors of Mrs. G. W. Atkinson, drew down the winner's share of this purse quite easily, defeating Eulogy by three lengths, while Ballet Dancer 2d trailed in last. Maize and Duchess Lace were the ones withdrawn.

The muddy track was an aid to Tailor Maid, which showed a liking for the going and ran a much improved race over the last time out. This was the first time Tailor Maid had been returned a victor at the Fair Grounds. Her last two races were dull performances. On both occasions she was badly beaten by Madge F. and others and failed to finish in the money.

Wida Rides Clever Race.

Tailor Maid was made a strong favorite in the trio that went to the post today, and under a good ride by Wida she was easily the best. Wida remained close up to the pace as Eulogy and Ballet Dancer alternated in the lead, and kept his mount under a slight restraint until he reached the stretch. Tailor Maid just needed one nudge to send her to the front and she drew away easily in the stretch. Eulogy, which was away in front, appeared to tire after going about half a mile, and dropped back. She appeared to be beaten, but she made a renewed effort in the stretch and easily took the measure of Ballet Dancer, though she was never able to get close to the winner. Ballet Dancer, which has not run in her best form for some time, again tired and lacked the speed which characterized some of her races last season.

The two-year-olds provided some of the best competition of the day in the opening event at three furlongs, which went to Marguerite Dixon. This filly graduated from the maiden class on this, her third effort, by defeating Joe Goodman three lengths. Joe Mancini was third. Marguerite Dixon was an equal favorite with Bunga Buck, a debutante owned by J. W. McClelland. This one is a son of Vulvain, and had been schooled so well that he was well played and finally backed down to 13 to 5.

Marguerite Dixon rushed to the front and set the pace all the way, appearing to like the mud. Bunga Buck ran greenly and though he had speed when once in his stride he showed the need of more experience. Joe Goodman and Joe Mancini were well up throughout and held the balance of the field safely in the stretch.

Airdrie Wins Under Lunsford.

Jockey Lunsford finally shattered the hoodoo which seemed to be hanging over him at the Fair Grounds. He had not ridden a winner since the first of the year until the second race today, when he won easily on Airdrie in a mile and seventy yards test for maiden three-year-olds and upward. Bronner had all the early speed in the race, but after leading to the head of the stretch tired and was lucky to save third. MeanwhileLunsford moved up steadily with Airdrie, caught the front runners in the stretch and drew away so readily that he won by four lengths from Bees Wing, which weakened near the end.

Eleven three-year-olds went to the post in the third race at five and a half furlongs, but the race at all times was a contest between Diamond Girl and Bobby Allen. The latter was away in front, with Diamond Girl close at his heels, and they drew away from the balance of the field. Diamond Girl, with only 95 pounds up, showed to advantage in the stretch and disposed of Bobby Allen after a keen tussle. The latter tired trying to keep up with the winner and just lasted to save third from Who Cares by a head.

William Woodware's Opportunity won the easiest victory of the day, romping home six lengths in front of O'Donovan in a six-furlong dash for selling platers. Cock o' the Main was third. Opportunity outclassed his field and opened up a gap which left him without much competition.

Counterbalance Barely Wins.

Counterbalance won a close decision over Midia at a mile and a sixteenth, having an advantage of only a head at the finish. Prunes was third. Midia showed fine speed and might have won the race if she had been kept in the best part of the track. Wida got into the soft going and his mount lost in the race in the last few strides after being in front all the way.

MAMBI HOME FIRST IN JUVENILE RACE

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 16.—Mambi, running in the popular silks of A. H. Diaz, scored very easily in the Baby Race at Oriental Park today, defeating a big field in the fast time of 0:35 3-5. The son of Hessian-Yallaha was making his first appearance and the easy manner in which he disposed of the field stamps him as a fairly good youngster. Corey broke him off well in his stride and taking an easy lead quickly increased his advantage to the end and won by three lengths. Dorothy was second, two lengths in front of Fiction.

Annabelle outclassed her field in the second event and won, pulling up by four lengths. She was at one time fully twelve lengths in front, with Merrimee looking back, and he finally eased her up to win by a comfortable margin. Sentry was ahead in front of Little One.

Col. Harrison gained a neck victory over Beverly James in the third race. Col. Harrison had a long lead in the early part but tired badly in the last sixteenth and barely lasted.

HUNT BEARS AND FIX DATES.

Johnson and Heydler Combine Business and Sport in Louisiana.

Presidents John Heydler of the National League and Ban Johnson of the American League are combining work and pleasure while they are drafting the major league baseball schedules for next season. The two league leaders are not only working on the baseball dates but are spending much time bear-hunting in the cane brakes in the northern section of Louisiana.

It is not difficult to imagine President Johnson hunting bear, for he has always hunted big game and his experiences in the American League have fitted him for this sort of fun. But it requires a stretch of the imagination to picture John Heydler, a man of quiet domestic nature, challenging bruins in the wilds of Louisiana.

It is believed that while in the South Heydler and Johnson will map out just what is to take place at the joint meeting of the leagues in Chicago on Feb. 11. They will discuss the possible candidates for Chairman of the National Commission to succeed August Herrmann.

Before leaving Chicago President Heydler made his position clear on the kind of a man the National League wanted for Chairman.

"From now on," said Mr. Heydler, "the Chairmanship of the National Commission will be a real job, not a sinecure. I do not mean to cast any reflection on the diligence of Herrmann, as he has been a wonderful man for the game. I really regret to see him stepping out of the position, but times are changing in baseball and therefore changes are required in the governing body of the sport. The position is a tough one. The man who takes it will be required to stand for a lot of criticism, because he is going to get it, no matter what he does. That has always been the history of the job, but Herrmann weathered it nicely and I believe has always been fair.

"Where is the right man going to be found?" asked President Heydler. "He ought to be unearthed somewhere, as this country is full of good baseball men. I have no idea who he might be. That will be up to the committee selected about a year ago to scour the country for men they thought qualified to be recommended to take the place. This committee has been at work. What progress has been made or what individual it has in mind I do not know, but I think the committee should be heard from before a decision is made.

"We want the right man for that position. Things have happened in baseball that have to be stopped. The game has an exceedingly bright future and we cannot afford to permit this future to be wrecked. Gambling has done much to hurt the sport. But that will be stopped and we are going to extremes to stop it. Club owners, of course, will have to assist us, but if they do not, we will have to take it upon our own shoulders to wipe it out of the ball parks. And that is part of the responsibility that will fall on the new Chairman of the commission. He must be powerful, fearless and independent enough to reach out after any player, club owner or official who by his act or association or speech brings the national game into disrepute."

PATTERSON DEFEATS LOWE

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 16.—England and Australasia broke even here today in the first round of the Davis Cup tennis matches for the world's team championship. Gerald L. Patterson, the Australian racquet star, defeated his English opponent, the veteran A. H. Lowe, three out of four sets by scores of 6—4, 6—3, 2—6 and 6—2. In the other singles match Lieut. Col. A. R. F. Kingscote won from the youthful Australian expert, J. O. Anderson, in straight sets at 7—5, 6—2, 6—4.

Play will continue on Saturday and Monday, with two singles and one doubles match still to be decided. The conditions of the Davis Cup matches call for four singles and one doubles match, with the winner to capture three of the five contests. Australasia is the defending nation, having won the international trophy from the United States at Forest Hills, N. Y., during the matches of 1914. England won the right to challenge the present holders by winning the preliminary round from France, Belgium, and South Africa during the Summer of 1919.

Today's games were played before 6,000 people in an intense heat of more than 100 degrees in the shade. Patterson made a splendid showing against Lowe, putting up some of the finest play ever witnessed in Australia. Lowe also made a good display, playing in the gamest fashion throughout. In the main, however, it was the winner's tremendous speed that upset Lowe's game.

It appears as though the match will depend upon the doubles, for even if Lowe were to beat Anderson on Monday it is hardly likely Patterson will fall before Kingscote. Brookes is not the player he was, and in that fact lies slender hope that the cup may return to the old country. Slight though that hope may be, it has to be remembered that Brookes and Patterson are not invincible. They were beaten in the doubles championship at Wimbledon by two fellow-countrymen.

INTERCLUB TENNIS TODAY.

Heights Casino and Seventh Regiment Teams to Meet in Matches.

The second interclub tennis match of the indoor season begins this afternoon on the courts of the Brooklyn Heights Casino, with the home players meeting the representatives of the 7th Regiment Club. Six matches are scheduled in singles and three in doubles, play continuing tomorrow morning and afternoon. Dean Mathey is Captain of the Casino team, with Samuel R. McAllister in charge of the armory men.

BENEFIT MATCH TOMORROW.

Gould Will Play Kinsella in Court Tennis at Tuxedo.

Lovers of the rare and fascinating game of court tennis will have an opportunity of seeing the two leading experts of the world in action tomorrow morning when Jay Gould and Walter Kinsella play an exhibition match of the best out of five sets at the Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club for the benefit of Robert Moore, the club professional of many years' standing. The contestants will play from scratch, as they did at Philadelphia recently, when Gould defeated Kinsella in seven out of eleven sets for the open championship of America, which practically carried with it the world's title.

Moore himself, in whose interest the encounter is being staged, will act as marker. He has been coaching at Tuxedo since 1900, and was before that for many years connected with the New York Racquet and Tennis Club.

Tomorrow's benefit is tendered by the Tuxedo Tennis Committee in recognition of the faithful services of the professional in the field of sport. A personal appreciation has been issued by the committee through Pierre Lorillard, Jr., and Stanley G. Mortimer, with an expression also of gratitude to Mr. Gould and Mr. Kinsella for their willingness to appear in a good cause, quite aside from the interest aroused by another court clash of these supreme stars of the racquet. Play will begin at 11:30 A. M.

Johnson to Lead Trinity Eleven.

WHITE OWLS POLO VICTORS.

Winn's Playing Defeats Bluebirds in Match at Durland's Academy.

Herbert Winn, playing at No. 2 position, led the White Owls to a victory over the Bluebirds last night in the continuation of the January indoor polo tournament at Durland's Riding Academy by the score of 12 goals to 10. In scoring their victory the White Owls overcame a handicap of six goals which they conceded to their rivals.

Winn's remarkable playing brought victory to the successful trio. Single handed he accounted for eight of his team's goals, and was the leading figure in a series of varied offensive plays which sent the defense of the Bluebirds crumbling before them. This was particularly true in the second period, when the White Owls, battling to change the complexion of a score favoring the opposition 8 to 4, held the play consistently in the Bluebirds' territory, and, led by Winn, hammered out their victorious margin of goals. In the second period Winn registered six goals for his team.

By their victory the White Owls advanced to a tie with the Oakes for the leadership in the tournament. Both these teams have scored two victories each. The Outcasts and Foxhunters, with one defeat each, are tied for third, and the Bluebirds, with two setbacks, hold down fifth position in the standing.

| WHITE OWLS (12). | BLUEBIRDS (10). |
| 1—M. Wilder. | 1—H. Levinsky. |
| 2—H. Winn. | 2—F. Gilman. |
| Back—O. Coleman. | Back—Dr. Biers. |

DE LA SALLE FIVE WINS.

Scores Twelfth Straight in Victory Over Horace Mann, 8 to 21.

Twelve basket ball victories without an intervening defeat is the extraordinary record now held by De la Salle's five. Last night the institute quintet added the Horace Mann School to its roll of victims, but not without one of the toughest struggles of the year. The score was 28 to 21. De la Salle led at the half-time intermission, 12 to 4, but the work of Loeb for Horace Mann, who caged a couple of floor baskets and five foul goals, helped build up the total.

| DE LA SALLE (28). | HORACE MANN (21). |
| Magrane | L. F. Levi |
| Moeschen | R. F. Loeb |
| Graham | L. G. Tilner |
| Murphy | R. G. Aydilotte |

Goals from floor—Magrane (4), Moeschen (3), Gillespie (3), Murphy (3), Levi (2), Loeb (2), Boyer (2), Aydilotte (2). Goals from foul—Moeschen, 2 out of 5; Loeb, 5 out of 7.

New Moon Basket Ball Team Defeats Poly Institute, 27 to 15.

The Crescent Athletic Club's basket ball team won its sixteenth straight game of the season last night, defeating Polytechnic Institute's five by a score of 27 to 15. The game was played on the New Mooners' court and was featured by rough, fast playing. The speed of the game accounted in some measure for the many fouls that were committed. Parmele and Kinney were the individual stars of the contest, and, strange to state, it was Kinney who substituted for Parmele. Between them they scored 21 of their team's 27 points.

| CRESCENT A.C.(27). | POLY INST. (15). |
| Parmele | R. F. Specht |
| Stannard | L. F. Nelson |

COLUMBIA TROUNCES TIGER FIVE, 26 TO 16

Tynan Is Leading Performer for New Yorkers—First Princeton Loss This Season.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 16.—Princeton's basket ball team met defeat for the first time this season tonight when the Columbia five triumphed by a score of 26 to 16. Columbia took the lead shortly after play began in the first half and the Tigers were never able to even the score. Columbia led at half time, 11 to 6.

Tynan, for the New Yorkers, led all hands in scoring from the floor. He tossed five goals in the course of the game, being closely pressed by Johnson of the same team, with four. The home players were so closely guarded at all times that they were able to tally only three baskets from the floor.

Columbia's play was fast throughout and the victory was thoroughly deserved. The Orange and Black players had poor eyes for the basket and lost many opportunities to score, while the Morningside Heights men seized practically all the chances that came their way.

Tynan was the star of the game. His clever playing and his accurate shooting kept the Tigers at bay at all times. The teamwork of the visitors was superior to that of the home team. The Princeton players showed a tendency to fumble, and, as a consequence, allowed the ball to remain in Columbia's possession for a considerable part of the game.

Handicapped by the absence of Netts, Coach Fred Luehring shifted his players several times in an attempt to put more cohesion in their work, but the experiments failed to prevent defeat.

Margetts's steady guarding stood out among the work of the Princeton players. After Johnson had scored four goals in the opening half Margetts was shifted to play against him, and held him scoreless for the remainder of the game.

| COLUMBIA (26). | PRINCETON (16). |
| Tynan | R. F. Hynson |
| Johnson | L. F. King |
| Stutz | L. G. Margetts |

Field Goals—Tynan (2), Johnson (4), Farrell (2), Watson; Opie (2), Hynson. Foul Goals—Farrell, 2 out of 6; Dickinson, 4 out of 10; King, 4 out of 6; Hynson, 1 out of 2; Brawner, 1 out of 1.

Wrestling at Hospital Armory.

The First Field Hospital, at 56 West Sixty-sixth Street, will hold a wrestling tournament at its armory, on Jan. 22, with George Spartas, the Greek heavyweight, meeting Harry Stevens to a finish in the feature event. Other bouts on the program will bring together G. Romanoff and Mierzwak, Joe Barsa and B. Avramis, Alex Haggis and Cyclone Peters. Another bout will show M. Olahl, a jiu-jitsu expert, against Martin Ludecke, each wrestler performing at his own style.

N. Y. U. FIVE SWAMPS BROWN

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 16.—The New York University quintet of basket ball players swamped the Brown five here tonight, 52 to 15. Throughout the contest the visitors showed superiority over the Hillmen and the New Yorkers were never in danger. N. Y. U. players were very fast on their feet, and time and again they swept the whole length of the floor, and by dashing team work wound up nearly every such drive with a goal.

The Brunonians were able but rarely to get team work under way. Brown was able to cage but four field goals, the other seven points being scored on free throws by Captain Pieri and Mallory. Three of Brown's four goals were long chance shots by Albright, Pieri, and Mallory, the defensive work of the visitors preventing anything like sure work at the basket.

Mooney, the visting centre, was the star of the game, both in all around playing and in goal shooting. In all he made ten field goals and twelve free throws.

| N. Y. UNIV. (52). | BROWN (15). |
| Cann | R. F. Albright |
| Goeller | L. F. Pieri |
| Mooney | C. Holmgren |
| Baker | L. G. Fox |

Goals by individuals—Pieri 1, Albright (2), Mallory, Goeller (3), Cann (5), Mooney (10), Delaney (2). Goals from foul—Pieri (5), Mallory (2), Mooney (12).

Referee—Mr. Sullivan, Brown.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 16.—Yale outscored Cornell at basket ball tonight by the slim margin of 19 to 18 points, the Ithacans three times tieing the score and twice springing into the lead, which changed five times during the match. Although Cornell scored first Yale led, 9 to 5, when the first half closed.

Cornell took a 12 to 11 lead early in the second half. Yale struggled into an 18 to 14 lead, which the visitors had cut down to 19 to 18 when the whistle blew.

Yale won because of slightly superior defensive play, in which Solly Cohen excelled in his offensive game and divided goal throwing honors with Captain Van Slyck. Porter's all-round play excelled for Cornell.

Captain Molinet displayed flashes of scoring form, but his failure to toss more than six out thirteen baskets from foul was costly. For Yale Van Slyck threw seven of nine. This was Yale's second straight victory and Cornell's second defeat.

| YALE (19). | CORNELL (18). |
| Van Slyck | L. F. Molinet |
| Jameson | R. F. Porter |
| Flynn | L. G. Cornish |
| Cohen | R. G. Bastian |

Goals from floor—Van Slyck (2), Jameson, Cohen (2), Hamill, Porter (2), Molinet (2), Rippe, Bastian. Goals from foul—Van Slyck, 7 out of 9; Porter, 6 out of 13.

Barnard School Five Victorious.

FLINN WINS STATE 3-CUSHION HONORS

Defeats Arthur Newman in Final Game of Tournament by Score of 30 to 23.

William H. Flinn is the New York State three-cushion champion of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. The representative of the Amateur Billiard Club won the title at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn last night by defeating Arthur Newman, who won the State and National Championship last season, by a score of thirty to twenty-three, in one of the best played and most interesting games of the tournament.

Three players, Ray Naughright, Arthur Newman and Harry Levine, were tied for second place in point of games won and lost, but second, third and fourth positions were decided according to the Olympic system. This system takes into consideration the number of points scored by the players tied in all of their games. Each of the players had engaged in nine contests, but Naughright was awarded second place by virtue of his having scored a total of 249 points. Newman won third with 242 points, and Levine fourth with 237.

Entering last night's match, which was the final one scheduled, Flinn and Newman were tied with six games won and two lost. One of the largest galleries that has ever witnessed a match at the National Academy was present to see the issue decided. Both players were in excellent stroke, and it was a battle royal from the first inning to the forty-ninth, in which the match was decided.

The players struggled on even terms almost throughout. At no time up to the closing innings did either have a decided advantage. Entering the forty-sixth inning Flinn led by the scant margin of one point, the score being twenty-three to twenty-two. In that round Flinn made his high run, a cluster of five. He followed this with one point in his next inning and won the game in the forty-ninth with a single tally. In the meantime Newman was able to gather but one point.

The match was featured by the safety play of both men and some excellent shot making. There were those who saw the match who were of the opinion that Newman might have fared better had he not resorted to so much safety playing. The former champion seemed determined to follow a defensive style of play rather than electing to go out after shots. In this respect the playing of the men differed appreciably. Flinn preferred to try to make points rather than to rely upon his ability to tie his opponent up and keep Newman from counting. In the long run it was this that told and weighed the scales of victory in Flinn's favor.

Only one game was unplayed in the tournament. Louis A. Servatius and Leonard D. Sacks did not play, and since the game had no bearing on the championship it was decided to call it off.

WOOD WINS BY WIDE MARGIN

Defeats Cahill, 250 to 164, in English Billiards Tourney.

| ENGLISH BILLIARD STANDING. National Championship. | | | | |

| Player. | W. | L. | H.B. | P.C. |

| W. Waldron | 1 | 2 | 38 | .333 |
| F. Pye | 0 | 3 | 33 | .000 |

Jackson Wood experienced little difficulty winning from Edward Cahill, 250 to 164, last night in the English billiard tournament for the national championship of the American Amateur Billiard Association at John Doyle's Academy. The game was a more or less one-sided affair, which showed Wood playing in his best stroke and Cahill decidedly off form.

Wood, who is a balkline player of no mean ability, is greatly served in English billiards by the stroke he has perfected. While he is not as good a potshot maker as the average English player, he excels in position play. Englishmen employ the draw shot with any frequency in this style of play or to much good purpose, but Wood depends upon it to a great degree and has found it of benefit.

Wood made high breaks of 39, 38 and 27 in twenty-eight innings, while Cahill's best clusters were 24, 14 and 13. The high breaks show the difference in the ability of the two men as that ability was measured in their match last night. Wood took command of the situation soon after the first inning, and thereafter was never in danger, but kept gradually increasing his lead.

De La Salle's Third Team Wins.

De La Salle Institute's third basket ball team defeated the Collegiate School midget quintet yesterday on the De La Sall court by a margin of 21 to 18. This success marked the De La Salle five's sixth of the season.

By RICHARD ALDRICH.

Another new opera was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening, in accordance with the plans and promises of the management, Leoncavallo's "Zaza." It was heard for the first time in New York by a very large audience, whose interest in the new opera was shown by the usual manifestations of a first night, cordially extended to those chiefly concerned in the performance. There was much applause after the first act, the most taking one of the opera, when the principals as well as Mr. Moranzoni, the conductor, and Mr. Ordynski, the stage director, appeared, and finally Mme. Farrar was recalled several times alone. The enthusiasm following the second act was less. After the affecting third act there was more, much of it being for little Ada Quintina, the child who enacted the part of Toto with something more than a child's parroting of instructions. It seemed indicated in some respects that opera had made an impression and that Mme. Farrar's impersonation of the heroine was found an effective and striking addition to her operatic portraits. At the close of the performance there were twenty curtain calls.

First Produced in Milan in 1900.

"Zaza" was first produced in Milan in 1900, eight years after the "Pagliacci" that has given Leoncavallo the same kind of fame that has beset Mascagni—that of having captured overwhelming success once and of never being able to overtake it again with numerous and frantic efforts. Oscar Hammerstein once thought of "Zaza" and announced it for one of his seasons at the Manhattan Opera House; but it was never undertaken there. The Chicago Opera Company a few seasons ago was more daring and produced the work here known, but never brought it to New York on any of its visits.

Its production now, at the Metropolitan Opera House, in view of its record, which has been one of unvarying failure, may be thought singular. But there is another suggestion of the straits in which operatic managers find themselves in these days. The obvious reason for it is the hope it inspires that it may prove a valuable medium in which the art and personality of Mme. Farrar may discover a new expression.

"Zaza," like so many other operas of recent make, is founded on a popular and successful play. The interest of various kinds aroused by the play of "Zaza" when it was produced at the Garrick Theatre in New York on Jan. 9, 1899, by David Belasco, with Mrs. Leslie Carter in the chief part, has not yet faded from the memories of adult theatregoers. The play was then heard in an adaptation made by Mr. Belasco from the French original by Simon and Berton, in which Mme. Réjane at first made a failure in Paris. In Mr. Belasco's version Mrs. Carter made so great a success that Mme. Iréjane took heart and renewed her attempt, making then of the play one of the most important pieces in her répertory. Leoncavallo himself made the libretto for his opera, following Mr. Belasco's version of the play, but omitting the fifth act entirely and with it the dénouement provided by the authors.

Considered "Shocking" 20 Years Ago.

"Zaza," twenty years ago, was considered "boldly realistic," "shocking," but "a strong moving drama"; its realism of "the artistic kind which treats of human character without selection or idealization"; realism that admits of no "beauty." Perhaps opera, modern opera—the most modern—has grown into standards of its own. After some of the things that have been observed upon the operatic stage in recent years "Zaza" seems hardly to stand out from the general run so sharply as to need denunciation in terms of special emphasis for its bold or shocking realism.

Zaza, the heroine, is a favorite singer in the Alcazar music hall in the French provincial town of St. Etienne. She is a spoiled creature, a girl of the slums brought up by a conscienceless and tippling mother, gaining fortune and notoriety through her natural gifts and the assistance of the good natured and unscrupulous Cascart, who has coached her and to whom she is a help in his own turns, and who, in the natural course of things, has appropriated her for himself.

The first act, an ingenious setting, shows what goes on behind the scenes of the Alcazar during a performance, including the dressing room of Zaza. Zaza disports herself there in the rude and capricious fashion of a spoiled favorite. The manager is evidently largely at her mercy. The manners and customs of her dressing room are somewhat free, and its door is open to many visitors—mostly of the opposite sex—though one of them is her mother, an objectionable person, to whom, however, Zaza is good. Finally comes Dufresne, on his first visit, a middle-aged merchant with some pretensions to virtue, which speedily melt away before Zaza's vigorous assaults.

In the next act Zaza and Dufresne are seen in her apartments, still in St. Etienne, where they have been living together and whence he is leaving to return to Paris. The faithful Cascart, who feels himself shelved, comes and gives her a friendly warning that Dufresne has a wife in Paris; whereupon Zaza, who has been building much upon this new connection, starts for Paris herself, in a fury of jealously and grief, to find out about it. Dufresne is seen in the third act in his Paris home, making up his mind to go back to St. Etienne and tell Zaza that all is over between them. After he has gone Zaza appears, quite overcome at the completeness of the evidence she is seeking, which includes an interview with Dufresne's little girl, who makes friends with the strange visitor and wrings her heart by her ingenuous prattle.

Long Scene of Gusty Passion.

Zaza returns to her provincial home. There, in Act IV., she finds Cascart again, awaiting her with the inevitable advice that she must throw over her lover, who himself then promptly appears. There is a long scene of gusty passion, as Zaza discloses her knowledge of Dufresne's married state, culminating in his fury when he learns from his mistress that she has been to his home and seen his wife and daughter. He leaves her.

The onld question presents itself: How far is "Zaza" set to music better than "Zaza" as a spoken drama—does the play cry out for musical interpretation to reveal its true significance, to intensify the potency of its emotional appeal? Probably "Zaza" is likelier material than has sometimes been turned from a play into an opera. There are more scenes of emotional intensity which music can fittingly interpret; there is less necessity of carrying on quick and crackling conversation in music, which is least fitted for such a task, than in some of these play-operas.

The first act offers amusing possibilities for a vivacious musical setting, which Leoncavallo has used with not a little technical skill, but its possibilities are largely dependent upon putting the chief part into hands that can carry it off. In the present production this act must be set down as the most successful one of the opera, precisely because it is done so well, so expertly and vivaciously by Mme. Farrar, with so much coarseness, joviality, rapidity and spirit, and because Leoncavallo has found something near the right note for it in his music, which does not err on the side of distinction. If long the note of light comedy, facile rhythms and perfectly obvious tunefulness.

A Rather Commonplace Score.

It must be said, in fact, that it is a rather commonplace score. It is a pretty complete exposure of the paucity of Leoncavallo's resources after he had emptied them of "Pagliacci." There was not much left. Fragments of obvious melody, including numerous waltz rhythms, gavotte rhythms and some others; snatches of "Pagliacci"—we suppose Leoncavallo has a perfect right to all the snatches of "Pagliacci" that he needs—and stretches of the plainest kind of filling; these are the chief constituents of the score. There are a few long sustained melodies, lyric outpourings; bits of orchestral color, grave and gay; amorous interchanges of the two lovers before they part; characterization of the dreadful mother; the pitiful little sentiment of Zaza's passage with the little girl. In the last act the composer has more serious problems to deal with—the sultry passion, the mixture of tears and laughter, the sudden revulsions of feeling and sudden outbursts of tempestuous fury and despair. Here his impotence to express and characterize deeply in music is most flagrantly exhibited. Throughout the piece the outstanding quality is its obviousness, the lack of originality, and at the same time the fluent skill and routine with which it is presented.

It is quite possible that the opera may have a success here that it has never before achieved. The theory is advanced, we believe, that the successive failures of the opera have been due to the lack of a suitable Zaza. If that is so, here is Mme. Farrar to redeem them all with an impersonation that is notably characteristic, the significant feature of a performance that is in many ways admirable. The part is very well adapted to her powers. It lies well for her voice, though apparently trimmed a little to suit it; but more important still is the way it suits the extremes of her temperamental qualities as an actress, the gayety and recklessness of the singer in her element in the unbridled freedom of the coulisses, the amorous passion, the oppression of grief in the later scenes, in all of which she gives a forcible and sympathetic portrayal.

There is much characteristic quality in Mr. Amato's fine impersonation of Cascart. Mr. Crimi is quite competent as Dufresne, a part in which it might be difficult to disclose much distinction. Mme. Howard makes of the alcoholic mother a broad portrait, doubtless such as is intended; trite Ada Quintina should have abundant recognition of her own for what she did as Toto, and the other parts are in hands quite competent to do them justice. Mr. Moranzoni conducted the performance and put all spirit and feeling into it.

BAIRNSFATHER ON THE WAR.

Creator of "The Better 'Ole" Describes the Famous Christmas Truce

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, whose drawings of "Old Bill" and the "Better 'Ole," have cheered up the men of the five allied armies and their people at home, told his audience at Carnegie Hall last night, where he delivered a lecture on "Old Bill and Me," that his caricatures were started in the latter months of 1914 out of "sheer misery of existence in the trenches where we were living on plum, apple, and hope."

"Old Bill" was an inspiration, he said, but he typified the "old contemptibles" who went out in 1914.

"Take away bad language and rum from the British Army," he continued, "and there would have been no Mons and no Ypres."

Captain Bairnsfather confirmed the story of the 1914 Christmas truce which received wide circulation and little belief in this country. His battalion participated in it, he said.

"I was looking over the parapet at daybreak," he went on, "and I saw German trenches were lined with heads. Then our men looked over. By midday both sides had passed through their entanglements and were mating in front of the wire. I saw one of my machine gunners, the company barber, actually cutting a German's hair in the middle of no man's land. The next day we were back at the old life again as if no truce had occurred."

During the lecture several more familiar Bairnsfather drawings were shown with one or two made on the American front, where the artist spent six months.

"I have been asked," he concluded, "who, in my opinion, won the war. No one country won the war. We all helped out each other. If it had not been for the Belgians at Liege and us at Mons, the French could not have made the heroic stand that they did. And if it had not been for the wonderful show you put up along the Marne and in the Argonne, the Germans would not have quit. We couldn't have done without you and your help."

TRADE BOARD FAVORS LOOP.

Thirty-fourth Street Body to Attend Subway Hearing.

The Directors of the Thirty-fourth Street Board of Trade, at a luncheon yesterday in the Hotel McAlpin, resolved to appear before the Public Service Commission next Tuesday to favor one of three proposals for a subway loop service encircling the shopping, theatre, and hotel section of Manhattan.

The board prefers the suggestion for a loop operating in Thirtieth Street, Seventh Avenue, and Forty-second Street, between Times Square and Fourth Avenue, and joint use of local tracks on both the east and west side trunk lines. Next in favor is the proposed extension of the Queensboro subway westward through Forty-first Street and Bryant Park to Seventh Avenue. The third proposal is for the extension of the Hudson and Manhattan tubes to the Grand Central Station without using the track in the first level of the Forty-second Street shuttle. The hearing will be before Transit Commissioner John H. Delaney. Various civic organizations will be represented at the meeting.

Philharmonic Plays Five Composers.

The Philharmonic's "three composers" named in the Pulitzer bequest, severally heard often in a season's round, were in planetary conjunction at yesterday's matinée in Carnegie Hall, when a large audience defied the blizzard. The orchestra played Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, Liszt's concerto in E flat, with Olga Samaroff, and Wagner's prelude to "The Master Singers." Before the symphony Mr. Stransky gave Mozart's overture to "The Magic Flute," and the solo number was preceded by a "Viennese Rhapsody" by the Parisian Florent Schmitt.

Edna Thomas in Song Recital.

Edna Thomas, a mezzo-soprano, whose voice as yet is uneven, lacking the feeling of power controlled, gave a recital yesterday in Aeolian Hall to a small but friendly house. She sang Italian, French and American pieces and a group of translations from the German, assisted at the piano by Walter Golde.

In the same hall last evening appeared Sarah Sokolsky Freid in a double program for piano and organ, a Chopin sonata for the former instrument, Liszt's fugue on a Latin chorale for the other, and Bach for both.

Urge Decoration for Mme. Réjane.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Léon Bérard, Director of Fine Arts, has been petitioned by a large number of persons prominent in theatrical and literary circles to recommend that Mme. Réjane, the famous actress, receive the ribbon of the Legion of Honor. It is pointed out that her services in behalf of art have been such that she is deserving of recognition. Many prominent actors and dramatists have been decorated recently.

ICE IN THE HARBOR CRIPPLES TRAFFIC

ONE STEAMSHIP GROUNDED

The big ice floes which have been driven down into the harbor and become jammed in the pier and ferry slips caused delay yesterday to the traffic of the port of New York and especially with the towing of lighters containing coal to the steamships. Ferry service from Manhattan to the Jersey shore was delayed by the ice, and the pilots said that it would be worse today. Liners and the transports could not get far enough into their piers to put out more than one gangway on account of the ice in the slips. The snowstorm late yesterday afternoon made matters worse, as it was impossible for those in the pilot house or on the bridge to see a hundred feet ahead of their own craft.

The first steamship reported to be in distress off the entrance to New York Harbor was the U. S. Shipping Board Vessel Lakeville, Portland, Me., for Norfolk, Va., which grounded at Jones's Inlet, Long Island, while making for an anchorage to remain in shelter. She sent out S O S calls by wireless, and wrecking tugs were ordered to go to her assistance. The U. S. Coast Guard Cutter Itasca also went to give her aid.

On account of the snowstorm, none of the life saving crews went out last night to look for the Lakeville, as she was lying so far off shore that she could not be discerned from the U. S. Coast Guard stations, but she is not in a dangerous position.

The only radio message received from the vessel was sent out at 7 o'clock and read:

CAPTAIN HASSELL.

The Lakeville is aground on a sandbank within a short distance of the place where the British freighter Grange Park went ashore last month.

Another call for assistance was received at the Naval Radio Station from the United States Shipping Board freighter John Adams, stating that she was drifting helplessly with broken steering gear about 250 miles southeast of Galveston.

During the snow storm the American steamship Wynnocha, also owned by the United States Shipping Board, which cleared yesterday for Rotterdam, collided with a loaded barge in New York Bay and sustained damages to her bow. One man, a sailor, was reported to have been knocked off her bow and drowned.

Several coastwise vessels went into Sandy Hook Bay during the afternoon and anchored until the weather moderated. Vessels coming into port were covered with ice, which clung to the masts and shrouds and blotted out the name on the board each side of the pilot house. On account of the difficulty in getting coal the White Star line postponed the sailing of the liner Cedric for Liverpool from Jan. 24 to Jan. 27.

The weather Saturday morning, when men and women were hurrying to business from the stations, bridges, and ferries, was 6 degrees above zero, and the slippery condition of the streets made walking difficult and slow. The wind had dropped to 10 miles an hour velocity, but it was tinged with ice. Horses slipped all over the ice-covered roads, and many of the animals fairly slid down the decline leading to the ferry slips. The snowstorm caused a rise in temperature, and at 11 o'clock last night it was 20 degrees above. The observer at the United States Weather Bureau predicts snow or rain today and warmer weather with south winds.

INSPECTOR BOETTLER ACCUSED OF ASSAULT

Restaurant Keeper Says Police Official Beat Him with Blackjack in Station.

Alleging that Inspector William F. Boettler of the First Inspection District had beaten him on the head with a blackjack until he was unconscious, in which condition he remained for three hours, Jacob Molaga, a restaurant keeper of 229 East Twelfth Street, yesterday procured a summons charging the officer with assault. The summons was issued by Magistrate Sweetser.

Molaga with thirteen other men was arrested Tuesday night when detectives under Inspector Boettler raided a restaurant in Clinton Street. On Wednesday the men were arraigned before Magistrate Joseph S. Schwab in Essex Market Court on a charge of disorderly conduct and discharged. At that time Molaga sought to make a charge of assault against the Inspector, but Magistrate Schwab declined to consider it as the man had no witnesses.

Molaga, limping with the aid of a cane, and with his face swollen and disfigured, went to Essex Market Court yesterday afternoon accompanied by his attorney, Henry Kahan of 260 Broadway, and asked for the summons.

The lawyer said that after his client had been arrested Tuesday night a keeper went to his cell at 2 o'clock the following morning and advised him that "the boss" wished to see him. He was then taken to an anteroom of the Clinton Street Station, the lawyer continued, where Inspector Boettler, according to the charge, beat him on the head with a blackjack. At the same time a Lieutenant, whose name was not learned, beat the prisoner on the legs with his club until he could no longer stand, Kahan told the Magistrate.

Molaga did not give any motive for the alleged assault by the Inspector. He did not remember how he got back to the cell, but said that about 6 o'clock the same morning Inspector Boettler took him from the cell again and washed blood stains from his face and head and prepared him for court.

Molaga sought a warrant for the arrest of Boettler, but Magistrate Sweetser refused to grant this, contending that a summons would be sufficient.

Rumely Protests Against Delay.

Dr. Edward A. Rumely, former owner of The Evening Mail issued a statement yesterday protesting against the failure of the Government to bring to immediate trial the action against him growing out of his purchase of that newspaper. It was alleged that Dr. Rumely purchased the paper in behalf of German interests and that he had been guilty of trading with America's enemy in the war. The trial had been set for this month in Washington, but yesterday Dr. Rumely was notified that the case would not go on there as scheduled.

BRITISH UNION OBJECTS.

Sliding Scale for Railway Wage Augers More Trouble.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The sliding scale in the railway settlement seems likely to produce another acute labor situation. The Laborite organ, The Herald, declares that the new problem is whether the trades unions should accept the agreements, under which wages vary with the cost of living, and prints an interview with Ernest Bevin, organizer of the Dockers' Union, who emphatically opposes the fixing of wages on what he calls a "fodder basis."

Bevin says that labor, like other classes, is entitled to claim the amenities of life and not mere subsistence, and asserts that all wage agreements made nowadays are subject to the scrutiny and veto of a secret combine of capitalists. He urges the workers to line up against "this vicious system."

Capt. Morath Not the Suicide.

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—Announcement that Captain Morath, commander of the submarine which sank the French battleship Danton and other vessels, had committed suicide in a Hamburg hospital, which was printed in the Lokal-Anzeiger yesterday, has been proved to be erroneous. The person who committed suicide was an elder brother of Captain Morath.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Industrial Stocks Yield to Insistent Selling Pressure—Bank Loans Discussed.

Stocks fell back yesterday under selling which was not in unusually large volume, but persistent at all times, reflecting active operations for the short account together with a considerable amount of liquidation of shares bought earlier for an expected advance. To a degree greater than noted for some time international events had a part in undermining quoted values. This was disclosed in weakness of stocks listed on both the New York and London Exchanges. News that the gravity of Bolshevist aggression in the Near East has caused a conference of allied powers at Paris was disturbing to the markets, including cotton as well as stocks, and while foreign sales of various shares were merely supposed and not confirmed, the professional operators evidently made much capital of the situation. A survey of the preceding session's recovery in the light of yesterday's decline led to the thought that short covering had been the major influence of Thursday. At the close declines among industrial issues extended from 1 to 6 points, with petroleum, steel, and motor stocks recording the effect of pressure more than others. There was a brief upbidding of the rails during the noon hour, but this was of such short life as to give the impression of an effort to divert attention from the tendency of other stocks.

Events and news of the day were of a sort to promote careful study of the credit and security market outlook. Again the foreign exchanges, excepting rates on one or two countries which did not participate in the war, declined in a manner to draw attention to the export situation. Sterling receded to $3.68½ for sight drafts, a rate which showed a loss of more than 10 cents to the pound from last week's maximum quotation. Francs and lire displayed weakness. While the future of American exports continues to supply the more lively subject of discussion, when with sterling moving toward the minimum rate of $3.64¾ established last month, it is the matter of imports which bankers are seeking to visualize. The trade of England and several Continental countries is growing, and movement of their exchanges against them works to stimulate sales of their goods in the United States. Should foreign manufacturers in the next few months be able to acquire and convert sufficient raw material on a basis permitting the full advantage of exchange rates, it is not difficult to conceive of an effect on commodity prices in this country.

It appears, however, that an immediate cause of declining sterling and francs is entailed in sales of bills by bankers here who are seeking to release a part of their funds now congealed in exchange. This was discovered yesterday in connection with recent discussions between bankers and representatives of the Federal Reserve Bank of ways and means to reduce bank loans. From what could be learned, the central bank management has urged member institutions to lighten their borrowings at the Reserve Bank, a movement presumably taking place in all the twelve districts. As the desired end can be attained only through a reduction of loans by member banks, it is reasonable to assume that the curtailment of accommodation to customers has been a factor in the stock market's recession of late. The program goes much further than the stock market, and is likely to find increasing reflection in loans used for purposes other than speculation in stocks. The decision of the Clearing House Association yesterday to limit interest paid on interior bank deposits at New York to 2¼ per cent. was looked upon as proof that member banks were strengthening their support of the Federal Reserve Board to restrain competition for deposits, thus helping to regulate the use of credit. Call money loaned at 8 per cent. in the morning, later easing to 6 per cent.

FEDERAL RESERVE LIMITS BORROWINGS

POLICY CURTAILS CREDIT

Reserve Rates Must Be Advanced—Heroic Measures Regarded by Bankers as Necessary.

The Federal Reserve Board and the Directors of the local Reserve Bank are determined that the bank's reserve position shall be strengthened and to this end are demanding that member banks' borrowings at the central institution be reduced. The first positive step in the reducing process, it was learned yesterday, has been directed toward those member banks which now are borrowing amounts which exceed twice their combined capital and surplus. The heads of several of these institutions have been summoned to the Reserve Bank and notified of the new policy.

The reduction of member banks' borrowings at the Reserve Bank will mean a curtailment in the amount of credit the individual banks are lending. This collateral reduction, it was said by bankers, is to be left to their discretion, with no attempt on the part of the reserve authorities to dictate how it shall be accomplished, or through what channels. The movement, it was pointed out, is not directed against the stock market any more than against any other component part of the financial and commercial structure. It merely is insisted that loans be cut down.

According to bankers who are fully informed regarding the present situation, the reserve system has now reached a point where its reserve ratio must be advanced. The local Reserve Bank is in even worse position than the system as a whole, for last week its reserve ratio was only 38.6 per cent., as against 45.4 per cent. for the whole system. This being the case, bankers said yesterday they expected more heroic measures would be taken in this district than elsewhere, but they contended that the whole system would feel the effects of the credit contraction, and that something would have to be done in all reserve districts.

One banker pointed out that only in two ways could the reserve ratio be advanced: Either the system would have to find more gold, or it would have to reduce loans, which latter would automatically reduce reserve deposits and outstanding notes, upon which the reserve percentage is computed. Gold production in this country is said to be below normal, while there is a steady outflow of the metal to the Orient and South America. Thus, he explained, the Reserve authorities were given the choice of stopping gold exports or of reducing loans. Apparently, he said, they have decided upon the latter course.

The contraction of loans is expected to have widespread results. Contrary to a general impression, the local banks are not unduly committed to stock market loans. Most of them have vastly more out in other directions, such as advances upon commodities and on goods destined for shipment abroad. Some of the large banks here have many millions tied up in bills of exchange. All of these things will have to be liquidated.

Stock market liquidation, in the opinion of some qualified observers, was accomplished in the break which the market sustained last November to an extent which met with the entire satisfaction of the Reserve Board. However, the expansion in other speculative media, including commodities of all sorts, real estate, and so forth, was not reduced greatly at that time and still obtains. The present curtailment movement, it is expected, will be directed toward these factors primarily.

Reduction of local banks' commitments in bills of exchange is feared by many as likely to precipitate a further bad break in exchange rates. The foreign exchange market steadied considerably after the panic of the first two weeks of December, and until the end of the year the market maintained a reasonably firm tone. Within the last few days, however, rates have been going down rather rapidly, and many believe this latest fall has been due to the liquidation of the bills which local banks have been holding.

Reports from London yesterday, which spoke of a further substantial rise in the price of gold were interpretd here to mean that American interests are buying the metal in the open British market. The price paid yesterday, 111s 3d an ounce, against the British mint price of 77s 10½d, represented a premium of about 40 per cent. The discount on sterling is great enough only in the American market to permit of paying this price, as neutral European exchanges are closer to the parity.

BANK INTEREST LIMITED.

Clearing House Fixes 2¼ as Maximum on Demand and 30-Day Balances.

The New York Clearing House Association yesterday voted to amend the rule governing the amount of interest which members may pay on demand and thirty-day balances by placing 2¼ per cent. as the maximum rate. The rule, until amended, provided that the highest rate paid should be one-half of the ninety-day discount rate on commercial paper at the New York Federal Reserve Bank. The maximum moved automatically with the Reserve Bank rate, and the rule was regarded as one of the greatest obstacles in the way of a further advance in Federal Reserve rediscount rates. With the passage of the amendment of yesterday, bankers believe the way is opened for an additional increase in Reserve Bank charges.

At the Clearing House the following statement was given out:

"The Clearing House Committee recommended the adoption of the amendment in view of the request of the Federal Reserve Board, which had the approval of the delegates from Clearing Houses all over the country at the recent conference held with the Federal Reserve Board at Washington, that there should be no increase in the interest rate paid on balances and that the maximum rate to be paid under Clearing House regulations should not increase with an increase in the Federal Reserve Bank discount rate for ninety-day paper beyond a maximum of two and one-quarter per cent.

There was some surprise yesterday that this action had been taken so soon. Following the meeting at Washington last week, it was decided to hold another meeting at Chicago on Jan. 23, and in many places it was expected that no positive action would be taken by the New York Clearing House Association until after that time. However, the local bankers apparently were not disposed to await the Chicago meeting.

The next regular meeting of the Directors of the Reserve Bank will take place next Wednesday, two days before the Chicago conference. After the amendment of the interest rule yesterday, it was predicted that the Reserve Bank would advance its rediscount rates before the Chicago meeting had had an opportunity to report. However, some bankers did not agree with this idea, preferring to believe that as a result of the efforts now being made to get member banks' borrowings at the central bank cut down there would be no pressing need for a higher schedule of rediscounts.

The action of the Clearing House Association was somewhat unusual in that ordinarily two weeks' notice is given of any move to amend the rules. This two weeks' notice must be waived, only through unanimous consent of the members, and apparently this was granted.

Two Roads Elect Holden President.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Hale Holden, Director of the Central Western Region of the Railroad Administration, today notified the Railroad Administration of his election as President of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy and the Colorado & Southern Railroads. Mr. Holden signified his willingness to continue his duties as Regional Director, however, until return of the railroad properties to private control, Director General Hines said.

UNITES MANHATTAN REVENUE DISTRICTS

WILL LESSEN CONFUSION

Beginning Feb. 1, the Second and Third Internal Revenue Districts, comprising the island of Manhattan, will be consolidated with the view to offset taxpayers' failure to file returns in the right collection district. William H. Edwards, Internal Revenue Collector for the Second District, has been placed in charge of the combination by an executive order signed by the President.

Under the new organization, Mr. Edwards becomes the head of what is thought to be the greatest revenue agency in the world. Official figures for 1919 are not yet available but it is estimated that the Second Internal Revenue District, which takes in Wall Street and the financial section, collected nearly $1,000,000,000. The Third district, embracing the mercantile and theatrical section of Manhattan, took in nearly $500,000,000.

It was said yesterday at Mr. Edwards' office in the Customs House that the office of what is now the Third Internal Revenue District at 28 West Twenty-third Street will be maintained, and if necessary, other subsidiary stations will be established. The order does not apply to the Bronx, which is a part of the Albany district, nor to the Brooklyn or Staten Island districts.

The presidential order was embodied in a letter which Mr. Edwards received yesterday from Daniel C. Roper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in which Mr. Roper said that "endless confusion has arisen on the administration of the internal revenue laws on Manhattan Island because of the failure of taxpayers to file their returns in the proper collection district," and that such confusion made "the detection of taxpayers who fail to comply with the requirements of the law more difficult and the administration consequently more expensive."

Since Mark Eisner resigned as Collector of the Third District, Richard J. McElligott has been acting collector. Joseph P. Pendergast, chief deputy collector of the Third District, had been mentioned as Mr. Eisner's successor, but his resignation was announced yesterday. He will enter business the first of next month. He entered the revenue service three years ago as a temporary clerk.

Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue Callan, who came from Washington to discuss the consolidation with Mr. Edwards, said: "Authorities in Washington feel that on account of the businesslike methods and satisfaction given to taxpayers in the Second District by Mr. Edwards, the same methods should be carried on throughout the Borough of Manhattan. That is the reason for the change."

BRITISH DEAL OPENED BY GENERAL MOTORS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Negotiations are proceeding between the General Motors Company and the Austin Motor Company, of Birmingham, for the purchase by the former of £1,000,000 of the latter's ordinary shares. The Austin Company is one of the leading English motor concerns and is about to raise its capitalisation to £5,000,000. THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent learns that General Motors has not yet decided whether to exercise its option or, in case it does so, whether it will begin the manufacture of American automobiles in England. Following closely, as it does, on the purchase by the Willis-Overland Company of an English factory, the deal is arousing great interest in automobile circles here, as it is held to portend a new invasion of British and Continental markets by the American concern.

NEW BRITISH BOND ISSUE.

Will Replace 6 Per Cent. Exchequer Bonds Maturing Soon.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The British Government plans to issue new five-year exchequer bonds, bearing interest at the rate of 5¾ per cent., to replace large blocks of 6 per cent. exchequer bonds maturing in February and March, according to an announcement made tonight by J. Austen Chamberlain.

There have been reports recently that the Government might take care of the maturing bonds and issue securities to clear off the large floating debt which is still outstanding, but the plan proposed would seem to indicate the floating debt will be left for the next budget.

LONG ISLAND ROAD SEEKS HIGHER RATES

PROTEST TO WASHINGTON

Public Service Commission Wants to be Heard First, and Asks for Local Control.

Ralph Peters, Federal manager of the Long Island Railroad, notified the Public Service Commission yesterday that the three-cents-per-mile rate which the company is permitted to charge did not pay the costs of operation within the city limits, because of the "many wage adjust

COTTON MARKET LOW AND UNSTEADY

40 TO 58 POINTS DECLINE

Liverpool Conditions Also Irregular and Unsettled—Exports Continue Heavy.

The cotton market yesterday suffered because of the circulation of rumors that all credit extensions are to be contracted for the next few weeks, or until the Federal Reserve Bank and the whole Federal Reserve system is put in a much stronger position than it now enjoys. As this contraction of credits is likely to hit the cotton trade in many more or less vulnerable points, the market for future contracts naturally reflected the situation and operators of all classes refused to consider any bullish arguments whatever.

The reduction of loans may influence the market at many different places. For example, it will make margin borrowing for purely speculative purposes more difficult. It will also tend to force out spots now being carried in warehouses, and, not the least important of its effects, it may even extend to the goods trade, where, it is understood, a considerable quantity of manufactured goods is being held for higher prices. As a matter of fact, the goods trade has been running prices up rather rapidly the last fortnight, and this has been one of the chief supports to whatever bullishness there has been in the futures contract market.

Yesterday's market opened off 10 to 25 points and then, after the briefest of rallies, pointed downward, continuing its fall until net losses had gone to as much as 50 to 70 points on the day. There was some come-back before the closing hour, but at no time did the market appear firm, or even give evidence of being able to sustain any protracted rally, and at the finish of business it was down 40 to 58 points. Spots were very dull and unchanged.

The Liverpool market, too, was irregular and unsettled. After opening steady and over-night gains of 25 to 40 points, it sold off later until at the close it was down 19 to 30 points from the previous day. Spots at Liverpool, however, were strong, closing at 28.66d., a gain of 61 points.

Exports continued heavy yesterday, totaling 60,253 bales and bringing the movement for the full week up to 280,705 bales, which makes the week one of the best of the season.

BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday .....6 per cent. for the best names.
Thursday .....6 per cent. for the best names.
The quotations are for six months' paper.

To Concentrate on Fine Goods?

There are many indications that the English mills will restrict their offerings in this country to the finer grades, in the meantime supplying the home trade with goods of medium and cheaper quality. This policy has been prompted, it is explained, by a desire to build up exchange in the promptest manner possible. With this development on imported lines, the American mills are understood to be selling to English customers the missing grades.

An Advance in Clothing.

Those piece goods buyers for clothing houses who have been permitted to view heavyweight fabrics for the next season and get prices report that on the basis of the new price range suits will average about $15 more for the Fall. Just how such advances can be secured, with the popular outcry against high prices, is a problem they have so far found no way to answer. The mills, they say, will not come down in their prices, even though the demand should not be up to normal.

How Fur Prices Have Advanced.

No better illustration of the way prices of fur, particularly of muskrat, have advanced in the last few years is required than one which was given yesterday by a well-known member of the trade. Some years ago this man had an elaborate Hudson seal coat made up for his wife, for which he paid a substantial amount. This year it was necessary to have the coat repaired and brought up to date, a process which cost about $75 more than the original price of the entire coat.

Woolen Opening Next Month.

The plans for the opening of heavyweight woolens by the leading factor in the market now call for the showing of lines on Feb. 26. It was generally understood in the trade that the opening would take place at an earlier date, but unsettled conditions have put dawn as the reason for postponement. As previously noted, the opening will be of the most formal sort, as allotments have been drawn up for all customers. Prices are expected to be high and the allotments will show, it is said, that production for domestic needs will still remain very scanty.

Gray Goods Prices Steady.

Prices continued strong and high in the local gray goods market yesterday. The business put through on printcloths included Eastern 38½-inch 60-48s for spot delivery at 21½ cents. Spot Eastern 38½-inch 64-60s again brought 24 cents, with April-June goods sold at 23½ cents. April-June business was also done on 39-inch 68-72s at 20 and 28 cents, respectively. More attention was given to sheetings yesterday than for some time. Sales included May-June five-yard goods at 19¾ cents, January-February 5.50s at 18 cents, May 56-60, four-yards at 25½ cents, and April-June 4.40s at 21½ cents. Fine yarn goods and the clothing styles continued to move at full prices.

Hard to Get $2 for $1.

One of the lessons which certain retailers of women's garments were said yesterday to have learned this season was that, even though the public does seem inclined to spend its money recklessly, it has not yet got to the point where it is willing to give two dollars for one. While the average retailer was content to put a normal mark-up on Fall goods and make a normal profit, certain members of the trade marked their goods up 100 per cent. or more. The latter prices attracted considerable attention, and it is contended that they gave the consumer an impression of widespread profiteering, which was not really the case. The result was that the innocent had to suffer with the guilty when the public refused to bite.

Knitted Smocks in Demand.

One of the features of the demand for novelty knit goods at the moment is the call for straight smocks with short sleeves. The most popular garments range from 22 to 25 inches in length and are trimmed with fringe at the bottom and at the ends of the sleeves. These are worn without belts and waists. All kinds of fancy stitches in this effect are favored by buyers, and both fibre and fine-wool garments are wanted. In the finer fibre goods, which will retail from $18 up, color demand is chiefly for flesh pink and white, while in the wool smocks, which will sell over the counter around $12.50, the favorite hues are turquoise blue, peacock, American Beauty, buff, navy and black. Such smocks are in demand for spring wear are the so-called Tuxedo effects. Filet sweaters are quiet.

Salesmen Hard to Get, Too.

That the present shortage of workers is not confined solely to garment operatives, mill workers, day laborers, &c., is vouched for by a knit goods selling agency which recently was in the market for some additional salesmen. Not only did it institute quiet inquiries in the trade for prospects, but it inserted on two occasions display advertisements requesting qualified men to call. When it wanted to enlarge its staff about a year ago the same agency advertised and got a large number of replies, which resulted in its getting several good men. This time, however, the results were practically nil. This is accepted as proof by an executive of the firm that very few salesmen unemployed, men of the type rejected a year ago did not answer the recent advertisements.

Coal Situation Less Tense.

In the anthracite coal trade, Saward's Journal will say today the seller still occupies the saddle, but his seat is becoming less secure. Every mild day shatters the scale against him to some extent and gives the buyers a corresponding advantage. It may be some little time before a buyers' market is seen in the sense that there will be plenty of coal for everybody at circular prices. Nevertheless, the day is coming when the smaller class of independent operators can dispose of their output at extravagant premiums. The bituminous shortage at tidewater has become even more acute this week, for, while the tonnage movement over the piers has shown a slight increase, coal is not coming in fast enough to replace the cars that are "loaded out."

Plans for Fashion Show.

A meeting of the committee in charge of the Spring Fashion Review to be given the Couture Division of the National Garment Retailers' Association on Feb. 3 was held yesterday at the Hotel Claridge and plans were approved for the staging of the exhibition. Alexander Leftwich, stage director for Daniel Frohman, has this part of the work in charge, and presented his designs which call for the construction of an Egyptian garden in the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Commodore where the event will take place. The meeting of the Couture Division, which was held the previous evening at the Hotel Claridge, was particularly gratifying to the members of the committee who believe that the whole-hearted support of the leading fashion houses will make the first American style opening the most important exhibition of its kind held in this country.

Last Week in Dry Goods Trade.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 16.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods was in excess of the same week last year. More customers were in the market than during the corresponding week of 1919. The volume of orders from salesmen on the road for both immediate and future delivery was larger than for the same period a year ago. Collections continue satisfactory."

London Wool Market.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—There were 12,800 bales offered at the wool auction sales. Bidding was more active and prices were steady. New South Wales scoured sold at 8s 7½d.

EXCESS PROFITS TAX.

Garment Makers Against It and Favor Open-Price System.

A resolution was passed yesterday by the International Association of Garment Manufacturers, holding its semi-annual meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria, which calls for the repeal of the excess profits tax. The tax was characterized as the keystone of the present high price structure. A further resolution passed by the meeting will lead to the establishment of an open-price service department of the organization, to be made up of selected groups of manufacturers.

William B. Colver of the Federal Trade Commission, in addressing the members on some of the present-day problems of business, spoke of the hardships imposed by inflexible anti-trust laws. He mentioned the attempts that have been repeatedly made to have the commission give "rulings in advance." The commission, not being gifted with clairvoyance, he said, cannot very well offer such rulings.

"What seems to bring us to an impasse," the speaker declared, "We cannot repeal the law. The lawyers cannot tell you what it means, and the Federal Trade Commission cannot prophesy. That leaves business in doubt, and doubt breeds suspicion and fear and despair. Sometimes it breeds defiance of law."

As a reasonable solution Mr. Colver recommended the bill introduced by Mr. Steele of Pennsylvania in the present session of Congress. This bill calls for a voluntary declaration of what a concern intends doing. Such a declaration would provide a complete defense in any court or Government agency against charges of breach of law. The license granted, however, might be withdrawn if complaint was made by some person on proper grounds.

"In the meantime," Mr. Colver explained, "the commission has used and is using a procedure which of late we call 'Trade Practice Submittal,' whereby a given industry is invited to take part in an open meeting in which the industry may put its stamp of disfavor upon any unfair practices which may have crept into the industry.

"Thus the commission secures for its guidance the mandate of business as to what is and what is not unfair, and thereafter, if the practice is persisted in and complaint made to commission proceeds with the certain knowledge that it has the backing and sympathy and understanding of the vast majority of the men in that industry."

Harry E. Dana, Secretary of the Cotton Finishers of America, told those present of the benefits to be derived from an open-price association, which, he said, has the effect of stabilising prices.

The association went on record as disapproving price guarantees and the promise of rebates. Such practices, it was pointed out, lead to speculation on the part of buyers, who order more goods than they need because of assurances against loss.

The general meeting of the association was brought to a close yesterday, but for today a meeting of the shirt manufacturers' division is scheduled.

TIGHT-FITTING COATS TO GO.

Sack and Box Styles Will Prevail Next Fall at Higher Prices.

Tight coats and overcoats are to give way to the sack and box coat next Fall, according to Harry Simons, Chairman of the Style Committee of the American Designers and Foremen's Association, which held its annual convention and exhibition at the McAlpin Annex yesterday.

"The loose fitting coat wears longer and maintains smartness for a longer time than the tight fitting coat," said Mr. Simons, "and the buying public are paying more attention to durability than they have in the past. The form-fitting overcoat of semi-military appearance will give way to the ulster type and box coat for the same reason."

It was the opinion of the majority of the designers present that men's clothing would be 50 per cent. higher in the Spring and under prevailing conditions 60 per cent. higher in the Fall. The reduction in the number of hours of the working week and the high wage scale which has come to replace piece work, especially in New York, was given as the chief cause by the designers for the increase in the cost of production which, they say, has gone up over 100 per cent. since the armistice.

COMMODITIES PRICES.

Advances Were Again Greater Than Declines This Week.

Dun's list of wholesale commodities prices showed a large number of advances again this week, the declines being outnumbered by more than 4 to 1. Of the 83 changes shown, which was the largest total in some time, 68 advances were included, against 65 advances in 76 revisions last week. Foodstuffs advances, while they numbered twice as many as the declines, were not so numerous as last week. One of the features in that part of the general list was supplied by the lower prices quoted on dairy products.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

In the foodstuffs portion of the list there were fourteen advances and seven declines. A drop of 3 cents in the price of the latter was the break of 50 cents a barrel that took place in Spring patent flour. Winter straights did not change.

In the local market for meats the only change was another rise in bacon. At Chicago live sheep and short ribs did not change, but higher prices were asked for live beef, live hogs, Middle Western lard, and mess pork.

Among the features of the week in the dairy products here was the drop of 4 cents a pound which occurred in the best creamery butter. Declines of 1 and 2 cents a pound, respectively, were seen in the best renovated butter and common to fair State dairy stock. Cheese prices were sustained at recent levels. A drop of 3 cents a dozen took place in fancy nearby eggs, while the best Westerns went down 7 cents. Both continued considerably higher than at this time last year, particularly the nearby fancy eggs.

A further rise in the price of fancy apples and another advance in California raisins marked the week in the fresh and dried fruits. Vegetables changes again were few, consisting only of advances in rice and in choice white kidney beans and a drop of 50 cents a barrel in rutabaga turnips. The leading raw sugar was nominally higher, with fine granulated really so. No revisions were listed in the teas, but No. 4 Santos coffee went up slightly. Changes in the spices included advances in both black and white Singapore peppers and in nutmegs and cloves. The week's revisions in the grains consisted of upturns in malting barley, hay, and straw, and declines in corn, oats, and rye.

Changes in the metal markets were fewer than at any other time since the recent strike began. Among the fluctuations in the minor metals were higher prices for antimony, lake copper, lead and tin and a lower one for spelter. The combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs, and oils contained only 3 declines, but had 20 advances. In the latter the various oils, save codliver oil, cut a big figure. Norwegian codliver oil dropped $15 a barrel for the week, or a total decline of $15 a barrel in three weeks. Sharp advances in resin and turpentine marked the week in the naval stores, prices of these articles now showing particularly high levels when compared with those current a year ago.

So marked was the upturn in hides prices that only two of the listed items failed to escape the advance. These were No. 1 kips and No. 1 calfskins. Leathers were unquotably unchanged. In the paints zinc products were higher. Both Chinese and Japanese raw silks moved to new high levels. Brazilian crude rubber declined. Other changes, aside from the textiles, included advances in common Hudson River brick, hemp, and fine burley tobacco.

Aided by strikes in mills at Calcutta, the local market for burlaps took on a firmer tone during the week. A better inquiry for goods here also helped. Prices continued to advance in the cotton goods trade, not only in unfinished cloths but in bleached sheetings and staple ginghams. The opening of Fall lines of worsted dress goods by one of the big corporations, at prices showing advances of 7½ to 10 per cent., attracted considerable attention.

BUSINESS RECORDS

Bradstreet's reports 128 failures in the United States for the week against 120 for the previous week and 285, 335 and 421 for the corresponding weeks 1919 to 1916. In the United States about 86.7 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had $5,000 capital or less, and 91.9 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

COLER URGES SUIT IN POKER SCANDAL

LATTER DENIES CHEATING

Says Story He Used "Markers" and Won $350,000 Grew Out of Demand for Loaned Money.

Bird S. Coler, Commissioner of Charities, yesterday requested Corporation Counsel Burr to institute civil proceedings against Louis Krohnberg, a manufacturer living at 879 West End Avenue, to recover, for the benefit of the poor, $1,750,000, which is five times the amount losers in stud poker games are alleged to have paid over to Krohnberg. In this letter calling attention to reports that the manufacurer is said to have won $350,000, the Commissioner said he was acting under Section 989 of the Penal Code Laws of 1916 whereby he was empowered to begin such a suit against the winner in a card game or game of chance, the money to be devoted to charitable purposes.

Corporation Counsel Burr said he would take up the request just as soon as certain phases of the traction inquiry were settled. Both Commissioner Coler and the Corporation Counsel said that this was the first instance, as far as they knew, where the statute had been invoked to recover gambling losses.

Another suit against Krohnberg was forecast yesterday by J. J. Lesser of 170 Broadway, who said he had been retained by Hyman Karp, an auctioneer, to sue the manufacturer for more than $25,000, representing his gambling losses of the last three months. Mr. Lesser said he had served a summons on Krohnberg yesterday. The sum for which the action was being brought did not represent Mr. Karp's entire losses, the attorney said, as the law did not allow for the collection of gambling debts after a lapse of three months.

Details of Story Revealed.

The details of the story of the winning of the $350,000 and the subsequent charge of cheating by means of marked cards by one of the players and of a fistic encounter were learned yesterday following Commissioner Coler's action.

With an announcement by Max Steuer that he had been retained by Mr. Krohnberg to institute suits for slander against the person or persons who circulated a story that his client had cheated at cards, Joseph M. Schenck, the motion picture producer and husband of Norma Talmadge, film star, admitted to friends that he and a group of losers, including himself, had engaged former District Attorney William Travers Jerome to take appropriate action against the man they accused of having introduced a deck of "readers"—marked cards—into their games. Beyond admitting that he had been retained as counsel by Mr. Schenck and the latter's associates, Mr. Jerome would not discuss the case for the present.

At the office of the Bijou Waist Co., 303 Fifth Avenue, of which firm he is the head, Mr. Krohnberg yesterday referred newspapermen to his attorney. Mr. Steuer said that the story current that Mr. Krohnberg had used marked cards was a falsehood and that instead of being a winner to the extent of $350,000 the manufacturer had lost more than $68,000 in the games. Mr. Steuer showed a pile of canceled checks totaling in excess of that amount which he said his client had paid out to winners.

Checks to Several Persons.

The names of the indorsers of the checks made out by Krohnberg and some of the amounts were as follows: Hyman Karp, $2,725, $1,555, $1,325, $1,550, $2,950; Joseph Schency, $1,820, $815, $915, $35.50; J. H. Mack, $1,860, $2,000, $2,230; S. Lewis, $3,000, $2,340. Other players to whom Krohnberg asserts he paid out money as a loser, the checks for which Mr. Steuer exhibited, were K. Litwin, Charles Piller, D. W. Friedman and a lawyer whose name was not made public.

Mr. Steuer asserted that the story started as the result of a demand made by Mr. Krohnberg on one of the players for the payment of $5,000, a sum which had been borrowed on a previous occasion.

A different explanation of the checks was given by one of the other participants in the games. This player said that the $68,000 did not represent losses, but rather checks which Krohnberg, as the biggest winner, had made out to the lesser winners, in conformity to a system known as "clearing the game."

Bill Proposes to Spend Part of War Department's Surplus to Aid Industry.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Expenditure of $15,680,625 from War Department surplus funds for airplanes and motors would be authorized by a bill introduced in the House today by Chairman Kahn of the Military Affairs Committee. The measure is designed to carry out the request made by Secretary Baker of Congress at the special session that sufficient appropriations be made to keep alive the war-created airplane industry.

Under plans of the War Department work to be provided by the authorized fund would be allocated so as to bring about the greatest development of the industry. Most of the money would be for bombing planes, the expenditure for these being $5,625,000. For purchase of other planes sums would be provided as follows:

Observation $815,000, two-seater fighting planes $212,500, pursuit $2,567,500, advance training planes $1,575,000. Allotment of $4,865,000 would also be made for the purchase of motors.

To promote further the aviation industry the department has asked that the legislation also set aside the legal provisions requiring department purchases on sealed bids, thus permitting it to allocate its purchases among various factories.

JUDGE ADVOCATE PROTESTS

Says Manual of Law in Detzer Case Has Been Torn to Shreds.

At the trial of Captain K. W. Detzer on Governors Island yesterday, Major William F. Kelly, trial Judge Advocate, made a motion, which was denied, to strike from the record that part of the testimony of Lieutenant Leonard D. Mahan which related to that officer's knowledge of the testimony of Captain Detzer during the trial.

The question had been raised by a member of the court as to where Lieutenant Mahan obtained his knowledge. The witness admitted that he had access to the trial records through the courtesy of Major Kelly.

In pressing his motion Major Kelly said yesterday: "The manual of law in this case has been torn to shreds. State secrets and communications which are privileged as regard to the Judge Advocate have been delved into when this court inquired as to what took place in my office. Therefore I saw that the rights of this Government have been invaded, and as the law officer of the Government at this post I cannot stay silent." After an executive session, the court overruled Major Kelly's motion.

Clement Davis of Chicago and Henry Pollard of Syracuse, N. Y., two former soldiers, testified in rebuttal for the prosecution yesterday that Captain Detzer had assaulted members of their party outside a café in Le Mans. They admitted they had been driking but denied they were drunk at the time. Davis admitted that he was tried by summary court-martial for disorderly conduct on that occasion and confined for thirty days.

Re: The Sherwin-Williams Company

In a paragraph in our advertisement which appeared in this newspaper December 4th, we unintentionally did an injustice to The Sherwin-Williams Company.

In that advertisement we offered for sale some equipment from The Sherwin-Williams Dye and Chemical Plants at Kensington, Ill. The wording was unfortunate and gave the impression in some quarters that the entire equipment was for sale and the plants were being dismantled.

The facts are that some of the abandoned equipment was being offered for sale to make room for newer and larger installations to take care of the rapidly expanding Dye and Chemical business of The Sherwin-Williams Company, who are one of the first American firms to enter this field and are now one of the very largest in the Dye and Chemical Industry.

It is a matter of keen regret to us that the wording of this paragraph should have created a wrong impression.
